Tokyo Revolt Crushed; 400 Army Rebels In Surrender

Rebellion Collapses as Emperor Issues 'Use Force' Order.

Six Hours Grace Given Beleaguered

Populace Warned, but Insurgents Offered No Resistance.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Feb. 29.—The Tokyo army rebellion has been crushed and 400 men and officers have surrendered, the Japanese embassy here announced today.

The embassy said its announcement was based on a broadcast from Tokyo. It came shortly after Emperor Hirohito directed Gen. Kohei Kashii, commander of the Tokyo garrison, to dislodge and suppress the rebels with force, if necessary.

The rebels, led by young army officers dissatisfie dwith liberal elements in the government, had occupied public buildings since "bloody Wednesday" morning, when they assassinated five government officials, including two cabinet officers.

Emperor's Ultimatum.

The Embassy said the rebels surrendered without resistance at 11:34 a. m., Tokyo time. The city was calm and quick retsoration of order was expected.

The emperor presipitated the capitulation when, at 5:30 a. m., he ordered Gen. Kashii and his men to surround the rebels, close in and fire upon them if they refused to surrender.

To fight would have been a direct affront of His Imperial Majesty, whom Japanese revere as divine, and it was believed this induced the rebels to give up.

Gen Kashii gave the insurrectionists six hours from the time he received the emperor's command to debate their course. His soldiers had drawn a tight net about the occupied buildings and were ready to carry out the order to "use force."

Apparently, the rebels surrendered by groups. First dispatches said some had capitulated. A short time later, the embassy said all had given up.

Gen. Kashii warned the city before his soldiers surrounded the buildings. In a radio statement, he said, "dangerous events" might occur in the southern part of Kojimachi Ward, where most of the rebel-occupied buildings are situated. He added that other sections wuold not be affected.

Gen. Hashii said he would keep the populace advised from time to time "until the emergency was past."

Later reports, unconfirmed, said a few rebels barricaded in the home of the late Premier Keisuke Okada, who was among those assassinated, still were holding out. Another small group was reported barricaded in the Sanno Hotel, from which several Americans reportedly were evicted.

Two Conferences Under Way

Tokyo (Saturday), Feb. 29 (AP).—High naval officials conferred until late in the night at the ministry of the navy, while princes continued to confer at the imperial palace with Emperor Hirohito.

Newspapers predicted the next cabinet would be "powerful in authority and national in composition, headed by a man of lofty personality and irreproachable reputation," but no names were mentioned.

In political discussion, however, Gen. Araki, "strong man" and idol of the troops, was widely mentioned for the premiership.

The American Embassy advised several Americans who reported their movements had been restricted to remain at home until the trouble was over.

The rebels had held their position since Wednesday. On the dawn of that day, they assassinated four elder liberal statesmen, Premier Keisuke Okada, Financial Minister Korekiyo Takahashi, Viscount Makoto Saito, lord keeper of the

Countess Barbara Near Death; King's Doctor, 2 Others Called Operation Follows Birth of Son; Reducing Diet Is Blamed.

By the United Press.

London (Saturday), Feb. 29.—Lord Horder, physician to King Edward VIII, early this morning was summoned for the third time to aid Countess Barbara Hutton von Haugwitz-Reventlow in her fight for life after a major operation following within four days the birth of her $40,000,000 infant son.

Lord Horder was accompanied by Dr. E. G. Slesinger, who performed the operation for an "abdominal obstruction" necessitated indirectly by Princess Babs' "slimming diet" of 1934.

Also present was Dr. Lang Roberts, famous British obstetrician, who attended the patient when she gave birth to her son Monday.

So serious was her condition that her family was called to her bedside. Her condition was believed aggravated and the operation precipitated by the birth of the baby, who was sleeping in the next room as his young mother fought for life.

Franklyn L. Hutton, her stepfather, canceled a Paris visit scheduled for Sunday, and decided to remain in London indefinitely.

Mrs. Hutton was summoned urgently Thursday night after the operation.

She remained with her daughter all of yesterday and last night.

Physicians announced their patient's condition "as satisfactory as can be expected."

Countess Barbara's lusty 7½-pound son was born Monday into the utmost in luxury.

Thursday, however, unfavorable symptoms developed and a late night operation was decided upon. The United Press learned that the "abdominal obstruction" was induced indirectly by Princess Babs' efforts to reduce two years ago.

At the time, it was recalled, her condition was so serious that she spent several weeks in a nursing home receiving treatment necessitated by her "slimming diet."

Gallinger Needs New Buildings, Board Declares

Public Welfare Unit Urges $1,000,000 for Project; Deficiencies Cited.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Construction of separate maternity and medical buildings at Gallinger Municipal Hospital was urged yesterday by the Board of Public Welfare as an absolute necessity.

In a communication to the District Commissioners, the board recommended a $350,000 maternity building appropriation and $650,000 for a general medical building. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen announced the estimates will be considered for inclusion in the 1938 budget.

Bed congestion, deficiencies in obstetrical care, inadequacy of teaching and X-ray facilities and other acute problems would be eliminated or relieved if the hospital were enlarged as recommended, the Commissioners were told.

Long-Felt Need.

This recommendation is the culmination of a long-felt need, recently expressed by Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock. The hospital's annual report for the year ended last June 30 says:

"The crowding of patients on these medical wards at times has prevented a high standard of treatment. It is clear that there should be no delay in providing a new ward building, similar to that which now exists, but devoted exclusively to the care of medical patients. Then the present building could be used exclusively for surgical cases."

In the matter of obstetrics and gynecology, it continues:

"The use of an auxiliary ward for convalescent maternity cases considerably relieved the crowding in this department during the year, but it should again be emphasized that all maternity work should be separated from other wards of the hospital.

"Other provision for this service would vacate space very seriously needed in the main building, and the necessity of increasing the total bed capacity of the hospital cannot be overemphasized."

Need for Expansion.

The welfare board, in its letter to the Commissioners, signed by Director Elwood Street, went further in protesting needs for expansion. It pointed out:

That the daily census of patients at Gallinger is averaging more than 900, whereas 750 is normal capacity.

That utilization of emergency housing facilities, such as transforming old shacks into quarters

Amba Alaji Falls, Ras Mulugheta's Big Corps Is Demoralized.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

With the Italian Army in Northern Ethiopia, at the Front, Feb. 28. The hard-driving Fascist army of 30,000 soldiers of the First Army Corps today captured Amba Alaji, where fleeing Ethiopians had retreated after their defeat at Amba Aradam.

Simultaneously, unofficial reports told of a major Italian victory in the mountainous Tembien region in the north, in which 3,000 Ethiopians were killed and Ras Seyoum's army was routed.

Italian officials said today's victory, coupled with the reports of the Tembien conquest, all but completed the objective the Blackshirts set for themselves before the start of the little rainy season within two weeks.

Objective Is Gained.

The capture of Amba Alaji completed the demoralization of Ras Mulugheta's 80,000-man army, first smashed a fortnight ago in the six-day offensive against the rocky Aradam ridge half way between Makale and Amba Alaji.

Pilots of Italian scouting planes reported that Ras Mulugheta's forces were retreating far south toward Dessye across the plains of Quorar.

They reported bombing columns of troops definitely identified as belonging to Emperor Haile Selassie, who himself was believed to have rushed north to reinforce the Ethiopian war secretary's broken army.

It was considered possible the Negus himself might take command of the field in the emergency.

The Ethiopians fled from Amba Aradam in such haste they stopped at Alaji only to erect minor defenses and then failed to man them.

The Italians have now conquered, since the start of their advance February 10, 60 kilometers (about 37 miles) south of Makale. The result of the victorious march is that thousands of Ethiopians are coming over to the Italians, as chieftains of captured towns are reported killing the fleeing Ethiopian warriors.

Negus Urges Sanctions.

Addis Ababa, Feb. 28 (AP).—Hope for additional sanctions against Italy instead of peace talks was expressed today by Emperor Haile Selassie.

"We hope there will be no further delay in the extension of sanctions," said the Negus, in a message to the Associated Press, referring to a

Antonio Scotti, Noted Barytone Of Opera, Dies Impoverished

By the Associated Press.

Naples, Italy, Feb. 28.—Four mourners only followed to the grave today the body of Antonio Scotti, beloved barytone, who sang for 33 successive seasons at the Metropolitan in New York and died here in poverty.

Scotti, a bachelor, died in retirement Wednesday, but the fact became known only today.

He was 70 years old. Friends disclosed he was in straitened circumstances, asserting he had been ill for a decade, although retired for only three years.

He had been living on funds supplied by the Music Lovers Foundation of New York, they said.

The veteran ended his active career of 43 years in 1933 at the Metropolitan and returned to Naples. Arteriosclerosis was the cause of death.

Without a family, Scotti had spent recent months almost in isolation. Italian newspapers ignored his death—there was only a paid obituary notice inserted by friends in the Mattino, of Naples.

It said Scotti "in his glorious lyrical career held high the prestige of Italian art on the stages of the world."

The body, followed by four friends, was buried in a small mausoleum the singer had bought here years ago.

Scotti, close friend of Caruso, was well known in Europe and the Americas.

Great figures of the music world and the public which loved him paid a touching tribute to Scotti

I. C. C. Orders Rail Fare Cut To 2 Cents

Pullman Fares Reduced to Three Cents a Mile; Surcharges Dropped.

Changes Effective June 2; Eastern Roads Hint Fight in Court.

By William V. Nessly.

In a surprise decision that immediately brought talk of a court fight, the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday ordered a Nation-wide reduction in railroad passenger fares to 2 cents a mile in day coaches and 3 cents in Pullmans.

The order almost halves the present fare of 3.6 cents a mile in coaches, while surcharges that cause Pullman travel to cost about 4 cents a mile were eliminated by the I. C. C. The order is effective June 2.

The decision included a warning to the railroads that only by cutting fares could they hope to regain their lost passenger business, but held out a rosy promise of increased patronage under the lower rates.

Hostile Reaction.

There was immediate hostile reaction among executives of Eastern lines, to which the order principally applies, since Southern and Western roads for some time have operated under voluntary reductions in fares.

M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said in Washington last night that the decision will have "a serious effect" on revenues of his line, though he was unable to say yet whether the road would fight the order in the courts.

"A terrific disappointment" was his first comment on the ruling, though further discussion was withheld pending a complete study of the 80-page decision. Mr. Clement was in Washington attending a meeting of directors of the Association of American Railroads.

J. J. Pelley, president of the association, declined comment at present.

The New York Central and the New Haven roads also opposed such an order at the I. C. C. hearings last October, and indicated then they might question the legality of such a decree if it was issued.

Victory for Willard.

On the other hand the decision is a victory for Daniel O. Willard, veteran president of the Baltimore & Ohio, who has advocated reducing fares in order to regain some of the lost passenger traffic. W. B. Calloway, general passenger traffic manager of the B. & O., welcomed the order and held the new rates were sufficiently competitive with the cost of automobile and bus travel to return some of the lost short-haul business to the rail lines.

The difference of opinion among the roads' executives extended to the I. C. C., and it was only by a 5-to-4 division the order was adopted. Commissioners Claude R. Porter, who wrote the decision; W. M. W. Splawn, Clyde B. Aitcheson, Carroll Miller and Marion M. Caskie agreed to the order, while Chairman Charles D. Mahaffie and Commissioners B. H. Meyer, Frank McManamy and William E. Lee dissented. Commissioner Hugh M. Tate did not participate.

Meyer expressed the view the new rates would not be low enough to recover "a large volume of business from private automobiles." Mahaffie said the new fares would not bring maximum possible

Gen. Hagood May Be Aided By Roosevelt

Army Officer's Friends Think President May Act in Suspension.

Byrnes Again Asks Dern for Leniency; Metcalf Assails Action.

By Robert C. Albright.

Possibility that the President personally may intervene in the suspension of Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood for criticism of the WPA arose last night, as a Senate sub-committee was named to look into the action against the general, and fresh criticism was heaped on the War Department for its "disciplinary" action.

In a reliable quarter it was disclosed that intervention has been discussed with the President as a step he could take to ease the public tension brought about by the Hagood suspension, but no decision has been reached and the matter was still open last night.

The War Department has declined to budge in its stand, set forth recently in a memorandum from Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff, to Secretary of War Dern, and if Maj. Gen. Hagood is restored to duty without prejudice it would be necessary for the President, in his capacity as commander in chief, in effect, to overrule the department.

Could Display Leniency.

Some admirers of Gen. Hagood think he could do this with good grace, demonstrating that the Administration is not so sensitive to criticism within the Government that it cannot accord leniency to an Army officer who expressed his private opinions to a House Appropriations sub-committee in executive session.

A sub-committee of three Senators, meanwhile, was named by the Senate Military Affairs Committee to consider the advisability of recommending to the Senate a resolution by Senator Jesse Metcalf (Republican), Rhode Island, to investigate the whole case. Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, was named chairman of the sub-committee, also comprising Senator F. Ryan Duffy (Democrat), Wisconsin, and Senator Robert D. Carey (Republican), Wyoming. Senator Logan said last night he will call his sub-committee together on Monday.

Other developments:

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, again importuned Secretary of War Dern to ease the punishment dealt Gen. Hagood, who was relieved of his post and sent home after referring to WPA funds as "stage money" before a Congressional sub-committee.

Metcalf Utters Warning.

Senator Metcalf, in a radio address, said that if the dismissal of Gen. Hagood is allowed to stand "no civil or military official will dare speak the truth to Congress or to the people of the United States, and we will be in the throes of a dictatorship."

A charge by Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson that Maj. Gen. Frank C. Bolles, commander of the Eighth Corps Area, was active in "politics" was attributed by former Senator Arthur Robinson, Indiana Republican, to a letter from Bolles to himself, opened by mistake by the Senate majority leader of the same name. Associated Press dispatches from

You Can't Arrest Me!

Police Say Senator Davis' Secretary Tried to Quash Speeding Charge Against Woman; Schulte Gives Traffic Ultimatum.

A NEW chapter in the story of "Senator Davis interested" was written at police headquarters yesterday.

Miss Alice Jones, 37, an employe of the Manufactures Committee of the Senate, was arrested for speeding. Policeman H. L. Thompson said she was driving 32 miles an hour in a 22-mile zone. She was escorted to headquarters and charges were preferred against her.

She was then released on personal bond to appear in Traffic Court. But a short time later Lieut. Frank Varney, acting captain of the traffic division, received a telephone call from Frank K. Boal, Senator Davis' secretary.

Varney said Boal attempted to intercede for Miss Jones by "telling him" to drop the case. And then, he said, Boal called back to "straighten things out" and ask police to dispose of the matter before it reached court.

Boal was told to communicate with Inspector B. A. Lamb, commanding the traffic division. But Lamb was absent, attending a hearing on Capitol Hill. He later reported that Boal called.

"The case will be handled in routine fashion and will be called in Traffic Court tomorrow morning," said Lieut. Varney.

Boal said he telephoned headquarters merely to learn the nature of charges against Miss Jones after she had related her experiences to stenographers in his office. He said that Senator Davis had nothing to do with the case and did not know anything about it unless he read of it in the newspapers.

Recently, court papers in the cases of two youths accused of sounding false fire alarms bore the notation "Senator Davis interested." The youths were released on "personal bonds and probation."

A STINGING ultimatum, bristling with caustic remarks and followed by embarrassing tension, was hurled at police and traffic officials yesterday when Representative Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, presiding at House sub-committee hearings on traffic, defended tactics of Congressional automobile drivers and told District authorities to "get out and act."

Supporting his demands with pencil-waving gestures, Schulte first referred to "a certain newspaper which has taken the opportunity to chastise members of Congress for traffic violations."

Later, talking to a reporter, Schulte, in a discussion of Congressional traffic violations, said:

"Conditions in Washington are splendid so far as official immunity is concerned. Now, if this town had a system of mayor and aldermen, it would be far worse. They are the kind to say 'You can't arrest me.' Then you would know what trouble privileges and immunity could really bring."

"Why should Congress as a whole be condemned for the mistakes of a few?" he asked at the hearing. "It is physically impossible for the 435 members of the House to do all the damage laid at their doors. And police officials tell me there are only a few members of Congress involved each month in traffic law violations."

Then came the ultimatum. Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, who concluded his testimony before the sub-committee several weeks ago, was recalled to the witness stand. He was attempting to explain certain proposals to improve traffic conditions, at the same time

$1,137,000,000 Tax Plan Shocks Leaders; Inflationists Cheered

Farm and Bonus Groups in House Prepare to Demand Currency.

Democrat Chiefs To Discuss Issue

Patman Forces Ready to Strike as Revenue Bill Is Offered.

Seizing on Administration tax moves as a strategic entering wedge, House farm inflationists organized yesterday to force Democratic and Republican House conferences on the $3,000,000,000 inflationary Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill, opposed by the President.

A more aggressive move was modified, almost as soon as it was agreed on. A plan to summon a caucus of Democrats, for action binding on the entire House majority, was tentative revised to call only for a conference of Democrats, which could take no binding action.

Blocked in every effort to obtain 218 names to a House petition calling for a vote on the inflationary measure (the petition still carries only 208 names), it was determined at a meeting yesterday to organize committees in both party organizations to consider every means to a vote.

Move to Seek Caucus.

Representative Compton I. White, of Idaho, was named chairman of the committee of Democrats, which was to petition for a Democratic caucus. Although only 25 Democratic signatures are required to force a caucus, White said last night that a good many Democrats are opposed to a caucus, and he will consult his committee over the week-end on the alternative plan of a conference. At a late hour last night he had not named his committee.

To bind a Democratic caucus to any plan, a two-thirds vote is necessary, and White admitted last night it would not be possible to get so large a majority. The alternative strategy would seek adoption of a resolution by a majority of Democrats attending a conference, calling on the Rules Committee to give the Frazier-Lemke bill right-of-way.

Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, co-author of the inflationary bill, was named chairman of a committee to petition for a Republican conference, where the plan calls for submission of another resolution. Lemke said last night he had not started his petition.

Bonus Group Lays Plans.

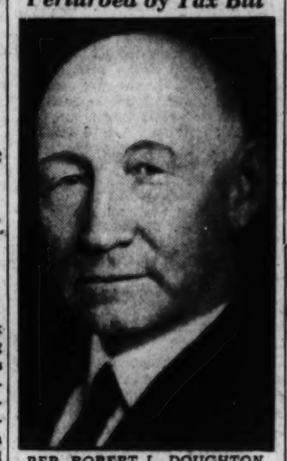
Canvassing the Congressional opposition to new taxes on the eve of an election, both the farm and bonus inflationists, the latter group led by Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, have chosen the time of presentation of a new tax bill as the propitious moment to strike. Representative Patman, however, has met with little success in organizing the bonus inflationists in any numbers, and this move, to a large extent, had been abandoned before the President made his latest tax proposals to Congressional leaders.

Although the Frazier-Lemke petition at one time climbed to 215 signatures, activities of Democratic leaders persuaded a number of signers to withdraw their names. This strategy called forth the denunciation by Lemke, in a letter yesterday to Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, inviting O'Connor to debate the issue with him either in the House or in any city O'Connor might name.

"The undercover method of getting names off of Petition No. 7 has become a National disgrace," Lemke wrote.

"Whether you accept this invitation or not, the denial of representative Government here in Washington will be carried by me into every agricultural State between now and next November, unless those who have been strangling this bill recede from their unwarranted position and do the only honorable and constitutional thing that they can afford to do, and that is to bring this bill up for discussion and disposition on its merits with ample time for debate and amendment."

Perturbed by Tax Bill



REP. ROBERT L. DOUGHTON.

786 Millions Yearly Is Required, Roosevelt Program Reveals.

$120,000,000 Held Share for Bonus

$500,000,000 Needed for Farm Act; Varied Levies Urged.

By Felix Bruner.

Startled by the magnitude of the task set for them by President Roosevelt, members of Congress yesterday began searching for a way to raise at least $786,000,000 a year in additional taxes for the next three years and $620,000,000 a year thereafter.

The long-anticipated Administration revenue program was revealed informally by the President yesterday and will be incorporated in a message to Congress Monday. Mr. Roosevelt made no suggestions as to how the money should be raised and he said he would make none.

The President said that, in round numbers, $1,120,000,000 is needed to take care of additional funds for bonus payments operation of the new farm legislation and reimbursement of the Treasury for processing taxes lost as a result of invalidation of the AAA by the Supreme Court.

Outlines Required Taxes.

He divided the total as follows: New tax, bonus, annual for nine years, $120,000,000.

Substitute taxes, annual, in place of the processing tax, $500,000,000.

Reimbursement taxes to cover what processing taxes would have brought in during fiscal year 1936, not to be permanent, but could be spread over one to three years, $500,000,000.

The President explained that these figures were round-number estimates and that the actual estimated need is $1,137,000,000.

Assuming that the "reimbursement taxes" should be spread over a period of three years, as the President suggested, the amount necessary would be $786,000,000 a year for three years and $620,000,000 a year until 1945, when the bonus is expected to be fully amortized. The $500,000,000 a year substitute for processing taxes, as the President explained, would be permanent.

Tax Size Shocks Leaders.

Senators and Representatives, including Democratic leaders, were shocked at the size of the revenue request, which would necessitate annual taxes nearly equal to the amount raised by all previous tax legislation under the New Deal. The request calls for tax legislation second only to the $1,018,000,000 revenue bill enacted during the last year of the Hoover Administration.

The request for $500,000,000 to finance the new farm program was expected; bonus taxation had been discussed, but the request for $500,000,000 to reimburse the Treasury for lost processing taxes came as a surprise. In announcing that he would make these requests, President Roosevelt said his objective was to balance the budget, except for relief expenditures. A request for a new relief appropriation, which may reach $2,000,000,000, is yet to be sent to Congress.

It was generally agreed that new processing taxes would not raise sufficient revenue to meet the President's requests. It had been anticipated that some form of processing tax would take care of the new farm bill. In some quarters it was predicted that Congress would refuse to pass such a large revenue measure, particularly in view of the coming election.

Various Taxes Suggested.

Suggestions for every conceivable form of taxation flew about the Capitol. It was suggested the income tax base be broadened; sales taxes were suggested; revival of some of the nuisance taxes was discussed; excise taxes of various characters were talked about. At the same time, inflationists took heart, seeing in the need for revenue an opportunity to put over their program.

Only one source of revenue was suggested by the President. He suggested that $150,000,000 could be obtained from processors whose taxes had been impounded and then returned to them under the Supreme Court decision. He referred to this proposal as a "windfall tax." He said that return of the processing taxes had been a "windfall" and that those who received them should return a high percentage to

Patron Killed, Store Robbed By Bandit Trio

'Lunch-Hour' Thugs Also Beat Manager With Sawed-Off Shotgun.

Washington's "lunch-hour bandits" struck again yesterday.

They held up a Sanitary Grocery Co. store at 1929 Ninth street northwest, killed a customer and seriously wounded the manager—all to get $40.

The customer was William R. Edmonds, colored, 49, of 1933 Eighth street northwest. He was beaten on the head with a sawed-off shotgun and died instantly.

The store manager, Gilbert J. Cronise, 32, of 3534 Ninth street northwest, also was struck over the head. He is in Casualty Hospital with a fractured skull and severe lacerations. His condition is critical.

The holdup was staged within 200 yards of the Second Precinct Station.

The bandits—two colored men and a colored woman—are the same, according to police, who last Monday held up a Sanitary store at 1016 North Capitol street, rapped the manager, Charles E. Blittle, over the head with a sawed-off shotgun, and escaped with $35.

Same Trio, Say Police.

Early last night, Maj. Ernest W. Brown announced he has offered a reward of $100 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the trio.

It is their practice, police have noted, to call at an early hour in the afternoon, when housewives are busy with luncheon. At such a time stores are least crowded and one of the clerks may be at lunch.

The bandits have never been content merely to hold up a store manager. Their method is to slug him and then loot the cash register.

It was shortly before 2 p. m. yesterday when the bandit car drove up to the Ninth street store. The woman, whose distinguishing feature is a gold "buck" tooth, went into the store first.

Cronise was alone.

The woman ordered some flour and some canned goods, and while Cronise was getting them, the two men walked in, the leader brandishing the sawed-off shotgun.

"Get down behind that counter," the leader ordered.

A moment later the bandit crashed his gun down on Cronise's skull.

Customer Is Slain.

Police believe that Edmonds walked into the store about this time, saw what was happening and started to flee. They surmised, further, that the bandit leader caught him just as he was nearing the door and cracked his skull with the gun butt, killing him.

Cronise later vaguely remembered the two bandits and their woman "stooge" running out of the store.

Cronise staggered to the street and told a passerby to notify police in the nearby precinct station. When they arrived, he collapsed and suffered a convulsion.

A. C. Cronise, father of the wounded man, told police it was the second time his son had been slugged by bandits.

Pajama-Clad Jeritza Barred—Almost—From Own Concert

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 28.—Maria Jeritza, world-renowned prima donna, sang calmly and beautifully to a Pittsburgh audience—but inwardly she raged.

First, she had been locked out of the Music Hall—denied admission at the stage door.

Then she had been forced to walk through hall after hall of the Carnegie Museum, wearing lounging pajamas, tramping over marble floors, instead of resting in her dressing room as she had planned.

Jeritza came early to the Music Hall. But the doorkeeper had his orders, and didn't know the singer. Besides, he thought, pajamas were hardly the garb of a famous prima donna.

She pounded on the door. They argued. Finally she got in.

But she entered only by a round-about way. The doorkeeper led her through the museum to the Music Hall.

Curtain time was near. She reached her dressing room only a few moments before her cue.

To the conductor of the orchestra, she explained:

"I have been in a museum! I, Jeritza! I have been in a museum! I look at stuffed birds! I say to the man . . . 'Let me in . . . I am Jeritza! Let me in, I am on the radio at 8!' . . . And he says . . . 'Then you are already on . . . So no matter!'"

House Closes Hearing on Bill For 54 Ships

Possibility of Pacific War Seen as Yard Advocates Ask Differential.

By the Associated Press.

Hearings which bristled with talk of war in the Pacific were completed by the House Naval Committee yesterday on a bill authorizing the construction of 54 Navy auxiliary vessels.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, indicated the committee will report the measure to the House next week. The 54 vessels would be built over a 10-year period at an estimated cost of $175,000,000.

House members from the Pacific Coast yesterday stressed the presence of the United States fleet in the Pacific and conditions in the Far East as emphasizing the necessity for rehabilitation of West Coast shipbuilding and repair facilities.

6 Per Cent Differential.

They urged inclusion in the bill of a 6 per cent differential in favor of West Coast shipbuilders as a means of restoring such facilities, which were described as having gone to "wrack and ruin."

"We know the slightest spark is likely to set the world on fire," said Representative Tolan (Democrat), California. "If war comes, you know where it will come from. Imagine our situation with a conflict in the Pacific and no repair, or construction, facilities on the West Coast! Consider what would happen if something happened to the Panama Canal and ships could not reach the East Coast for repair."

Tolan said no ships have been built on the West Coast since the war. He added repair and construction facilities adequate to meet Navy needs are not available, and aid from the Government in the form of the differential is necessary to build them up to required standards.

"We would be worse than blind if we closed our eyes to conditions in the Far East," said Representative Kahn (Republican), California. "This is a matter of national defense which we believe the committee must meet."

Three Principal Links.

The Navy, the merchant marine and building and repair facilities were described by Representative Welch (Republican), California, as the three principal links in the national defense chain.

"These three are interdependent in our security," said Welch, "but the third link—building and repair facilities—is the missing link. Our West Coast yards have gone to wrack and ruin since the war."

Asserting there are seven Navy yards and seven private yards available on the East Coast, Welch told the committee "there are not four yards on the Pacific which the Navy can use for major repairs and construction."

I.C.C. to Determine Time Zone Change

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP).—The petition for Chicago's inclusion in the Eastern standard time zone belt was placed in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission today, as last-minute adjustments to the city council's ordinance, making that time effective Sunday, continued.

The Board of Trade, under an emergency rule, revoked its previous decision to move the clock ahead an hour, in conformity with the new city time and decided to continue trading at its old hours next Monday on Eastern standard time.

City officials said all municipal clocks would be turned ahead one hour at 2 a. m., March 1, under the ordinance adopted in November. Most local business houses and Federal Government offices here have decided to synchronize their hours with the advanced time.

Railroad main lines will remain on Central standard time, and the Chicago Livestock Exchange decided it also would continue operating on the old standard.

Montanans to Entertain.

The annual dinner and dance of the Montana State Society will be held this evening at the Hay-Adams House. Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Representative Roy Ayres and numerous others will be in the receiving line at the reception before the dinner.

Rail Fare Cut

revenues to the carriers. McManamy questioned the right of the I.C.C. to order the cuts and Lee called the order an invasion of "the field of management."

Extra-fare trains were not involved in the order.

Lower Rates Successful.

Opposition to the order among rail executives centered on whether there would be a sufficient increase in passenger traffic to provide a net gain in revenue. The experience of Western and Southern roads was cited by those in favor of the reduction, it being pointed out that Southern roads gained 24 per cent in one year in passenger-miles under their lower fares, while Western lines gained nearly 16 per cent. The passenger-miles on Eastern roads increased only 4.6 per cent in the same time, the Associated Press reported.

Bus lines were quick to announce they would not reduce fares. Ralph A. L. Bogan, president of the Great Eastern Bus System announced the decision for his road, while in Chicago L. G. Markel, chairman of the National Bus Traffic Association told the Associated Press the order "probably will attract more passenger traffic to the rails, but the buses won't lose any business."

Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president of the Air Transport Association, said that airlines "with a universal scrip plan allowing 15 per cent reductions in many cases now meet rail plus pullman rates. I see no necessity at the present for lowering airline passenger rates."

Increased railroad travel, however, was indicated in the case of commercial travelers. A. W. Franklin, supreme secretary of the United Commercial Travelers of America, told the Associated Press in Columbus, Ohio, that the lowered rates will "send the salesmen back to the rails."

Thousands of business and professional travelers who drive private cars now will tour their territories by train when the new rates go into effect, he declared.

As an indication of what the I.C.C. order means in cash outlay it was pointed out that the present coach fare of $8.14 from Washington to New York, 224 train miles, will be reduced to $4.50. The day coach fare between Washington and Chicago will be cut from $27.78 to $15.36.

The commisison pointed to the tremendous increase in travel by Americans since the beginning of the automotive era, saying that within less than a decade "the travel habits were quadrupled, and at the end of four years of depression were still more than three times as great as they were prior to the automotive era."

Travel to Increase.

Then, as a promise to the railroads, the report continues that "any assumption that the saturation point in the travel market has been reached would be as fallacious as a like assumption would have been in 1920.

"It seems certain that the future travel desires of the American public will increase with the years, and that, with attractive service and price, promoted by modern sales methods, the railroads should be able to develop for themselves a trade volume at least as great as that which they formerly enjoyed."

It sets forth the "serious efforts" made by the Eastern roads to win back business by improvement in roadbed and passenger service, both through better equipment and increased speed and changed schedules, but insists such improvements cannot by themselves achieve the goal.

The report calls for consideration of "the great portion of the public . . . who have become accustomed to motor travel or to stay at home and who can be induced to use the rails only by a reduction of fares."

Meanwhile, there were other developments involving the railroads.

The constitutionality of the 1935 railroad retirement act was challenged in the District of Columbia Supreme Court by 16 employes of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. They said they preferred the pension system of their road to that of the Federal Government with its tax on salaries. Employes do not contribute to the present Coast Line plan.

Transportation Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman agreed, upon application of railroad labor groups, to withhold until March 31 his 11 proposed orders requiring terminal unification in numerous cities. The labor groups said they wanted time to formulate a policy to protect those workers whose jobs might be lost through the consolidations.

The National Coal Commission urged reduction of present coal freight rates to "reasonable levels," saying it would oppose continuance of present emergency surcharges on bituminous coal rates beyond June 30, when they expire, unless continued by the I. C. C.

Crystallization of Republican Situation in Ohio Clears National Picture; Borah Threat Fades.

By Franklyn Waltman

WITHIN the last few days the Republican Presidential situation has undergone its first shaking down. There may be others before the party convention is held in June. As a result of the crystallization of the Ohio situation the whole picture among the Republicans is much clearer.

In the first place, the Ohio contest will not be the important, momentous test which some several weeks ago thought it would be. It will be a test of the efficiency of the Republican machine in Ohio. Although a victory there by Senator William E. Borah would go far to bolster up his rapidly fading prospects, most observers who know the Ohio situation predict a Borah defeat by Robert A. Taft, the favorite son.

This contention is borne out by the result of polls taken among Ohio Republicans. A poll taken among 10,000 party workers by Ohio Republican leaders shows that Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas is the choice of 56.3 per cent; Senator Borah the choice of 20.8 per cent; Col. Frank Knox the choice of 13.1 per cent, and Herbert Hoover the choice of 4.1 per cent.

The America Speaks Poll published last Sunday in The Washington Post shows approximately the same trend. In that poll Gov. Landon was the choice of 44 per cent; Senator Borah of 23 per cent, Herbert Hoover of 19 per cent and Col. Knox of 10 per cent. Both polls are in agreement that Alf Landon is the choice of Ohio Republicans as closely as that sentiment can be measured without an election. Both put Senator Borah in a poor second place; neither indicates any militant, enthusiastic demand for the Idahoan, despite the organization his friends have set up in Ohio. Indeed, they show unusual conservative strength against the left-wing Borah.

Such being the case, Senator Borah might well retort: Why doesn't Landon or Knox come into Ohio and cross swords with me? The answer is that neither of the two candidates think it is necessary to do so. If Senator Borah had a good prospect of carrying Ohio, it would be foolish for either Alf Landon or Frank Knox to keep hands off. But it is clear to the campaign managers of that pair that the Taft ticket of delegates will win—and that ticket is comprised of Landon and Knox supporters in about equal number.

If the Borah ticket is defeated—as is expected—both Landon and Konx will have reserve strength in the Ohio delegation, which on the first ballot will vote for its favorite son. The Ohio delegation in the end will go to the candidate showing the greatest strength—and that man at the moment appears to be Alf Landon.

Senator Borah today is not nearly the threat to conservatism in the Republican Party that he was a month or two ago. Instead of being apprehensive over his candidacy, the Eastern leaders are beginning to poke jibes at it—regard it as something amusing. Witness the statement several days ago of former Senator Walter Edge, of New Jersey, challenging the Idahoan to enter the New Jersey primary and at the same time asserting sentiment in that State favored Alf Landon.

Another weakness in the Borah armor which has been barely mentioned in the daily press is the militant fight being made against him by Negroes and Negro organizations because of his frequent outspoken criticism of Republican pandering to the colored vote and because of his hostility, on constitutional grounds, to the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill.

Evidence that the Borah campaign managers are worried over the activities of Negro leaders against their candidate was seen some days ago when Representative Hamilton Fish inserted in the Congressional Record—apparently to be mailed out as a campaign document—a spirited defense of the Idahoan against Negro attacks. Mr. Fish undertook to justify the Borah opposition to the anti-lynching bill; recalled that his father was the Secretary of State who proclaimed the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution; recited that he commanded a Negro regiment in the World War and, then coming back to the Idahoan, told how Senator Borah was "probably the only living Republican statesman who ever saved a colored man from being lynched by an infuriated mob."

Negro opposition is a serious threat to Senator Borah's prospects wherever he runs—now or in November. For instance, in Ohio there are more than 200,000 Negro voters. In Illinois there are in excess of 230,000 Negro voters. Both are sizable blocks of votes, sufficient to determine the result in any kind of a primary or election. This is especially true since the Negro in border and Northern States has become conscious of his political power.

Col. Knox's prospects in recent weeks likewise seem to have dwindled. At one time he was determined to accept the Borah challenge in Ohio—but just before he took the plunge he was advised that he had little strength in the State. The Ohio leaders persuaded him to draw back and let them handle the situation, agreeing to give some of his supporters representation on the organization slate.

Col. Knox is expected to defeat Senator Borah in Illinois. The New Hampshire delegation will be uninstructed, but will be partial to Col. Knox, a native of that State. He has a potential following in several other States, but not so large as to be impressive. The Knox camp apparently has reached the conclusion that too much time has been spent by the candidate in making speeches and that not enough has been done to build him up in the public eye. Alf Landon has built himself up by shunning publicity, staying at home and letting his friends tell about his budget-balancing in Kansas.

Now the Knox camp apparently proposes to take a leaf out of the Landon notebook. The colonel has for all practical purposes withdrawn from the public rostrum. When last heard of he was down in Arizona on a vacation, seeking to emulate the great Teddy Roosevelt by hunting mountain lions. Perhaps he feels that after tracking down a few lions he will find it easier to get a few delegates.

His managers this week issued the first edition of a "Frank Knox for President" clip sheet for the use of editors. It contained the first installment of "The Story of Frank Knox;" almost two columns of things Frank Knox has said; an account of Frank Knox going after the mountain lion in Arizona—"for the second time in modern history a fighting colonel has the West gasping for breath," the article explains; a reference to Col. Knox serving under Old Teddy in the "Rough Riders," and an account of how Col. Knox learned economy and budget-balancing first from his mother, and then from his wife.

It will be interesting to see whether this type of campaigning will improve the colonel's prospects—to see whether hunting mountain lions has the appeal of the President's million-dollar smile—but whether it does or not, the colonel should have more fun hunting lions than in addressing political clubs.

Neutrality Act To Be Signed By Roosevelt

Action Due by Midnight; Proclamation Expected On African War.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt announced yesterday that before midnight tonight he would sign the new neutrality law designed to keep the Nation at peace despite foreign wars.

A proclamation declaring continuation of United States neutrality in the Italian-Ethiopian war was expected to accompany the signing.

The bill extends the present neutrality law expiration from February 29 to May 1, 1937. It would continue the present embargo on shipment of arms and munitions to belligerents, and, in addition, embargo loans to belligerents.

Further, it would make the law apply to all nations entering a war, instead of just the first participants, as provided in the present law. It would exempt the American republics when at war with non-American nations, but not when allied with non-American nations in a war against another nation.

Education Urged.

While the President was preparing to sign the measure, Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, urged in an address that the new theory of peace through neutrality be accompanied by a campaign to educate the world to the profits of peace. Speaking before the Academy of World Economics here tonight, Thomas said:

"If some Congressional committee would investigate the question as to how much money can be made out of peace instead of indirectly honoring men who are wise enough to make a lot of money out of the war which brought almost universal economic destruction, we might get farther."

While commending the neutrality act as a step forward, Thomas cautioned that while it "may keep us out of war, it has not done so in the past. Embargoes may prevent war, but they have not done so in the past. * * *

Not the Real Key.

"But even if international approval is obtained we have not the real key to overcoming war. We must first find the purpose of war and then get the substitute. To use a psychological expression, if war gives a nation certain satisfaction, we must recognize war for what it has become, a national habit, and supply this substitute which will satisfy their 6,000-year-old habit."

Commending the theory of the League of Nations, Thomas said:

"The experiment attempted now in Europe of using collective economy may result in discovering a number of things * * * World cooperative action wherein the medium of economic pressure is used at a time when economic competition is the goal of every nation that is a party to the economic pressure agreement seems logically utterly impossible, but such world co-operative action may work. It it does, the world is better off."

Hagood

Indiana reported. Bolles in the letter inferentially said he was supporting the Indianan.

Senator Byrnes appealed to Secretary Dern in a letter written after he personally called on the Cabinet member on Thursday. The South Carolinian disclosed in the letter that Hagood, six days before his testimony before the House War Department appropriations sub-committee had published his testimony, had requested the sub-committee not to publish anything he had said that might be construed as criticism of the Administration.

Always Loyal Democrats.

"It is difficult to believe," read the Byrnes letter, "that Gen. Hagood intended to indulge in partisan criticism of the Administration or encourage such criticism in view of the fact that for generations he and his family have been loyal Democrats.

"In view of this evidence as to the manner in which these statements were made in executive session, the urgent plea of Gen. Hagood that it not be published, and his expressions of regret when it was published, should you not conclude that the action of the War Department in relieving him of his post is not justified.

"He has given 40 years of his life to the service of his country. He has made a record of which the Nation is proud. He should not be disgraced by removal from his post because of a statement made in executive session and published in violation of his urgent request that it not be made public."

In a reliable quarter is was said, however, that the War Department does not intend to modify its order relieving Gen. Hagood from duty, and that any action in that respect would have to come from the President.

Hagood was said to have wired the following request to the clerk of the House Appropriations Committee on February 2:

"* * * Please eliminate my entire testimony from the printed copy of the hearings, but if this cannot be done at least strike out everything that is inconsistent with the budget or could be construed as criticism of the New Deal."

The South Carolina Senator also disclosed in his letter that Gen. Hagood, who is from the same State, wired him he was "shocked" that he was accused of critizing President Roosevelt, and that if his testimony had been printed in full it would have shown a broader view.

"No criticism could have been intended," Hagood was said to have wired Byrnes, "as I am personally a stanch advocate of the Administration and know full well that the President has done more toward proper housing of the Army than has ever been done before."

Condemnation of the War Department's suspension of Hagood, that burst forth in House and Senate on successive days after the order was made public, was continued yesterday over the radio, with Senator Metcalf, sponsor of the proposed Senate investigation, leading the attack.

"Gen. Hagood's removal is simply another instance of the terrorism which exists in Washington," Senator Metcalf said in his broadcast. "Petty tyrants and academic autocrats are attempting to control this country by the suppression of facts and the squandering of public funds.

"Even persons in private life who dare to criticize the New Deal are not immune from persecution. They are subjected to mud-slinging and official interference with their private business, even to the extent of turning up their income tax records for many years past."

Metcalf said it is "shameful" that a man of the caliber of Gen. Hagood should have his career terminated "simply because he is frank and straightforward."

Senator Metcalf said the cases of "prominent men who have been driven out of the Government service because they had the honesty to say what they thought are too numerous to mention."

"Few persons, either in the military service or out, believe that Maj. Gen. Hagood's testimony warranted his removal," Metcalf said. "All of us know that the so-called boondoggling of the New Deal has resulted in a tremendous waste of funds."

He said that "as the true story of terrorism and gang rule becomes known, fewer and fewer men of conviction will enter the Government service, and we will find our United States completely controlled by demagogues and quacks."

Housing Problem Complicated by Conflicting Laws, Unorganized Industry and Lack of Uniform Mortgage Procedure.

Following is the sixth and last of a series of articles based on an investigation of the housing problem, the Federal efforts to encourage building and probable new legislation.

Copyright, 1936, by The Washington Post.

By Felix Bruner.

NUMEROUS and conflicting building laws, the fact that the building industry is composed of small and comparatively unorganized units, the competitive real estate situation, and lack of uniformity in mortgage procedure are among the obstacles that must be overcome if a solution of the housing problem is to be approached.

Local taxation conditions add to the confusion. With ever-increasing and changing taxes, prospective home owners in many communities are hesitant to take the risk of long-term commitments. This is equally true of lenders.

In addition, in most of the large cities areas suitable for large low-cost housing projects have been taken off the market by sub-dividers who have sold lots covering large areas completely surrounding the cities. It is estimated that in many communities subdivisions are sufficiently developed to take care of all the housing sites necessary for the next 30 years. In order to find cheap real estate in large enough blocks for extended housing developments with low rent it is necessary to go outside the subdivided areas, usually many miles from the center of cities.

Building Wages High, Incomes Low.

High housing costs have been attributed to many factors, including the complicated and costly distribution system of material producers and the high cost of labor. Hourly wages in the building industry are high, but on the basis of annual incomes, most building trades workers are among the low-income groups. One of the great needs in the industry is some plan that will keep building trades workers employed during most of the year.

Unlike other large industries, there is no continuity of operation or employment in the building business. Seldom is exactly the same group of workmen employed on two or more projects. There is constant shifting. In other words, the building industry still is far from adoption of mass production principles and from consequent lowering of costs.

These are among the problems being studied by the Federal Housing Administration and other governmental housing agencies.

Meanwhile, the FHA is giving considerable attention to the encouragement, through insurance of mortgages, to the building of large housing units to be rented at comparatively low figures. While a great many such projects have been examined, only one has actually been completed.

First Private Housing Development.

The one project that has been completed and which is an outstanding example of private housing development is Colonial Village in Virginia, just across the Potomac from Washington. The first units were constructed at a total cost of $1,128,000 with a Government-insured mortgage of $875,000. The development was constructed by Gustave Ring, Washington builder, and the loan made by the New York Life Insurance Co.

Colonial Village as it now stands includes 276 dwelling units, all of which are occupied. The rental is not in the really low-cost bracket, as it averages about $12.50 per room per month, making the monthly rental of apartments range from $37.50 to $60.

Work is now going ahead on the addition of 450 more units under a new Government-insured mortgage of $1,480,000. Incidentally, loans on large developments of this character are not limited to 80 per cent of the appraised value of the property as are loans on individual one and two family houses.

The only other large-scale housing project on which a loan has been accepted for insurance is at Meadville, Pa. This development is expected to cost $1,000,000 and a loan of $800,000 has been made from the Pennsylvania State workmen's compensation fund. The development will consist of 200 semi-detached units. It will be constructed by the firm of Hegeman & Harris, which heretofore has confined its work largely to construction of large industrial and office buildings.

In addition, the FHA has insurance company commitments on two other loans, totaling $9,000,000 for construction in New York City.

Low Rental Specification Not Defined.

While the law specifies that the FHA shall insure loans on low rental projects, no decision has ever been made as to just what constitutes low rentals. Rent that may be considered low in one community may be high in another. The FHA has considered large projects that would rent as low as $5.90 per room and as high as $17 per room. The lowest rental project being considered is in a Massachusetts industrial community, but it involves extensive remodeling of already existing buildings.

Another function of the FHA is the insurance of loans for modernization and repair of homes and other buildings. This was provided in a law which expires April 1 and which may not be renewed.

Money borrowed for modernization and repair far exceeds that borrowed for new one and two family home construction. A total of $254,070,729 in loans has been insured under the repair and modernization section of the law, comprising 708,405 loans.

Modernization and repair loans ranged from $200 to $50,000. The highest percentage in numbers were $200 and less. Many of these were for the purchase of refrigerators, heating equipment and plumbing. A total of 6,082 lending institutions participated in these loans.

The section of the law probably will be dropped, not because there is not a great demand for such loans, but because it is felt they can as easily be obtained without insurance.

Eckener Sees 35-Hour Atlantic Plane Service

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Feb 28 (AP).—Dr. Hugo Eckener, German Zeppelin expert, today discussed the possibility of regular North Atlantic plane service, requiring 30 to 35 hours, but declared "that kind of transportation does not compete with Zeppelins for comfort."

Dr. Eckener's statement was made to a group of guests who inspected the new Zeppelin, LZ-129, which is to make its trial flight next week.

Zepppelin experts are occupied with a study of weather conditions over the North Atlantic, Eckener said. He explained that the planned flights are only intended as demonstration trips, for the time being.

Hoffman to Sift Purser's Story Of Kidnap Bills

Governor Awaits Affidavit of Ex-Ship Employe to Aid Hauptmann.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 28.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman said tonight he was anxious to question Umberto Pastori, former ship's purser, who claims to have a clew to $30,000 of the ransom paid for the Lindbergh baby.

Pastori, in Santiago, Chile, told the United Press that on April 9, 1932—seven days after the ransom was paid—a man known as "E. B." came aboard the Grace liner Santa Olivia at the Canal Zone, gave him $30,000 in small bills to keep in the ship's safe and said: "The Lindbergh kidnaper is aboard this ship."

State police here who have investigated hundreds of Lindbergh kidnaping clews, said they never had heard Pastori's story, and added they would investigate if the matter is referred to them officially.

Pastori made an affidavit for the Santiago Bureau of the United Press to which he was referred by two South American newspapermen.

At his Perth Amboy home tonight, Attorney General David T. Wilentz said he was anxious to see the affidavit, which is on its way from Santiago.

"I will forward it immediately to the State police for investigation," Wilentz said.

Hoffman hopes Pastori will come to this country.

"I certainly will be glad to hear his story if he returns," the Governor said.

C. Lloyd Fisher, chief counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, who is under sentence of death for the murder of the Lindbergh baby, said "by all means I want to see that affidavit."

Fisher continued his fight for Hauptmann's life by saying he was considering swearing out a perjury complaint against Joseph Perrone, New York taxi driver, who was one of the principal prosecution witnesses at the Flemington trial

Hoffman charged yesterday that Perrone's testimony was vague. The taxi driver identified Hauptmann as the man who gave him a dollar to carry a note to Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon during negotiations for the ransom. Hoffman and Fisher contend Perrone identified several other men, as well as Hauptmann, as the man who gave him the note.

200 Soap Makers Seek Tax Refund

Payment of a coconut oil processing tax of some $26,000,000 to the Philippine government was challenged further in the District Supreme Court yesterday when attorneys representing the Haskins Bros. & Co., of Omaha, Nebr., amended their original suit to include some 200 "similarly situated" soap manufacturers.

The fund, now being held in the Treasury, was unlawfully exacted from the manufacturers, the suit charged, and should be returned because of the alleged unconstitutionality of the revenue act of 1934, under which the tax was levied.

William Stanley, A. C. Munger, and J. Edward Burroughs, attorneys representing the Haskins company, said the intent of Congress in setting up the tax was to regulate agriculture and manufacturing in connection with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The company has paid $160,879.74 in taxes into the Treasury.

Unless the court restrains the Treasury the fund, now earmarked for the Philippines, will be paid over.

30-Hour Work Bill Passage Seen in 1937

By the Associated Press.

Forces backing the Black-Connery 30-hour-week bill saw little chance yesterday for its enactment this year.

Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, who has led the fight for a shorter work-week for the the last five years, said: "It doesn't look good for this year, but it will go through flying as soon as we get back next year if President Roosevelt is re-elected."

American Federation of Labor representatives privately indicated, too, that they felt the bill would stay on the shelf for the present session.

River, Go Away From My Car!

Scene in the Upper Potomac, above Chain Bridge, shortly before the angry waters began to recede. Officials last night said all dangers of a general flood are passing, and the river will fall today. Despite this optimism, however, it will be a day or so before the owner can drive this automobile again.

Flood Threat Passing As Ice Melts Slowly

House Near Key Bridge Is Smashed; Warmer Weather Due.

The swollen, icy Potomac rushed toward Chesapeake Bay and the sea last night, with the possibility of a general flood at its lower reaches diminishing.

While the river was disgorging one of the heaviest ice burdens in its history, the rivers and floods division of the Weather Bureau announced if the ice continues to melt without serious jamming, the stream will begin to fall today.

There was some fluctuation in the Potomac level below Harpers Ferry, due to the ice, but the tributaries above that city were falling slowly.

The springlike temperatures yesterday caused remnants of the ice to all but disappear. As the mercury reached a maximum of 46 here at 4:30 p. m., the thaw persisted.

Warmer weather is due today, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. Forecast was for a clear day and slowly rising temperatures.

Meanwhile the first actual damage caused by the high water and ice was encountered here, when one District home was smashed in two above Key Bridge.

Carried on the swift current, the ice crunched against the residence of George Hicks and his family. The frame walls caved in, and late yesterday the ill-fated structure was a complete ruin.

17-Year Mystery Case Of Missing Man Opened

Toronto, Feb. 28 (AP).—The Evening Telegram today said it was informed the Ontario government is taking definite steps to reopen an investigation into the 17-year-old mystery of the disappearance of Ambrose J. Small, millionaire theater owner.

Small disappeared December, 1919, and nothing has been heard of him, despite a world-wide search.

Patrick Sullivan, independent investigator, working in behalf of the theatrical magnate's sisters, says the newspaper has conferred with Attorney General Roebuck and will also consult Maj. Gen. V. A. S. Williams, commissioner of provincial police, relative to "startling facts" in Sullivan's possession.

Austria Seizes 'Esquire' Issue For Von Starhemberg Article

Magazine Editor Declares 'Astute Guess' That Prince Wants to Be King Was Responsible for Confiscation.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Feb. 28.—The March number of the magazine Esquire was confiscated throughout Austria today by police.

The confiscation order was issued on the ground that an article in the magazine was offensive to Prince Ernest von Starhemberg, vice chancellor of Austria.

Esquire is the first American magazine to be hit by the stringent press law.

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP). — Arnold Gingrich, editor of the magazine Esquire, said an "astute guess" in an article in the magazine that Prince Ernst von Stahremberg is ambitious to become Austria's king brought the confiscation in Vienna today of the magazine.

"I can understand how the prince would take offense," Gingrich said, "although of course the story doesn't pretend to be anything more than an astute guess, based on what the writer, Emil Lengyel, has observed.

"Lengyel says in the article under fire (March issue) that the Prince poses as desiring the restoration of the Archduke Otto, but actually wants to effect his own coronation. That's the hitch."

Lengyel, a former New York newspaper man, wrote that:

"He (the Prince) is a shrewd king maker who wants to be king himself, despite his protestations of loyalty to the House of Hapsburg * * * the Prince has decided it would be of better advantage to work for himself than for Young Otto. His helmet is in the ring."

Gingrich said of the seizure of the magazine by the Austrian police, "It's quite funny."

"We have expected, on occasion, to encounter that in Germany or Italy, however," he said, "we've printed many anti-Fascist stories."

The magazine met foreign objections only once before, he said. It was taken temporarily from Mexican newsstands for an illustration which offended Mexican army officials.

Chaco Peace Delegates Study Paraguay Regime

Buenos Aires, Feb. 28 (AP).—Delegates from the United States and five South American nations at a Chaco peace conference today discussed the question of recognition of the new Paraguayan provisional military regime.

It was learned from an authoritative source they agreed to act simultaneously on this question and that one would not recognize the new government until all agreed to do so.

Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay were the South American nations represented.

Teachers to Strike

Jessup, Pa., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Sixty-eight school teachers here will go on strike Monday because they have not been paid recently, many of them for eight months, they said tonight. They said they are owed $45,000 in back salaries.

19 Continental Directors Sued For $1,093,541

'Negligence' Is Alleged in Action to Recoup Bank Creditor's Losses.

Seeking to recoup huge losses to Continental Trust Co. creditors, merged with the now closed Commerical National Bank in 1929, John F. Moran, reciver, filed suit against 19 Continental directors yesterday in the District Cupreme Court for $1,098,541.75. Their "negligence," the suit alleged was responsible for the deficits.

Continental, immediately prior to the merger, purchased 4,091 shares of Commerical stock and later sold 90 of them for $20,314. The price paid for the stock was $980,848.79 and was a complete loss to Continental, Moran said.

In addition, he stated, Continental purchased 901 shares of its own stock for $112,692.96. Neither of these transactions, the suit declared, was authorized by the bank's charter and all losses flowing to the bank through them should be attributed to the directors.

Directors Named In Suit.

Directors named as defendants were: David A. Baer, Col. Wade H. Cooper, who at one time was president of three banks here; William L. Browning, C. C. Calhoun, Norman Fischer, Charles A. Goldsmith, Nathan B. Scott, 2d., William H. Sholes, L. C. Strider, Conrad H. Syme, William Clark Taylor, Charles W. Warden, Leon Oppenheimer, Gen. Frank T. Hines, Minnie M. Thayer, administratrix of the estate of Delos W. Thayer, Arthur L., and Karens G. Evans, executors of the estate of Victor L. Evans, and David B., James L. jr., and Henrietta B. Karrick, executors and trustees of the estate of James L. Karrick.

Tracing the history of the Continental-Commercial consolidation, Brice Clagett and Charles E. Wainwright, attorneys for Moran, said that in December, 1929, the directors authorized the purchase of between 3,000 and 4,500 shares of Commercial stock at a price not to exceed $250 a share.

Col. Cooper Defends Operations.

The following month, Continental officers and the executive committee were given authority to enter into an agreement with R. Golden Donaldson, former president of the Commercial, to buy 3,250 shares at $250 per share, together with an option for the purchase of an additional block of 1,000 shares. The stock purchases, it was said, were for the purpose of consummating the then-pending mergre.

Directors named as defendants were those who served during the three-year period preceding the placing of the Continental in receivership. That was February 26, 1933. The Continental, even after the consolidation, maintained its corporate identity and had some assets.

The bank's operations were defended last night by Col. Wade H. Cooper, head of the Continental Bank, who said:

"The suggestion that the Continental directors should have known that this commercial bank stock would have no value of securities on the New York Stock Exchange totaled $66,000,000,000. By June, 1932, their value had shrunk to $13,000,000,000."

China to Reinforce Military Machine

Nanking, Feb. 28 (AP).—Alarmed leaders of the Nationalist government today decided to strengthen China's military machine because of the situation in Tokyo.

Military and political officials were called into emergency session here by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, virtual dictator of the Nanking government.

The council decided, however, to continue a policy of patient waiting, although a minority urged that this was a propitious time to defy what was termed Japanese "'aggression" in north China.

Plans were drafted for strengthening the army and to rally public morale behind the government.

In an effort to build up a modern army, China last year ordered all male high school and college students to undergo at least one year of intensive military training.

British Donations Asked To Buy Ethiopian Arms

London, Feb. 28 (AP).—Azaj Martin, Ethiopian Minister to Great Britain, today issued an appeal to the British public for contributions to buy guns and ammunition for Emperor Haile Selassie's armies on the East African battlefield.

A public appeal, the minister said, was necessary, because "we find ourselves confronted with an embargo against raising a public loan in the city."

Capital Women Lose Jewelry In Hotel Raid

Mrs. Weinberg, Mrs. Whittin Victims in $20,000 Holdup in Florida.

Two Washington women, vacationing at Miami Beach, Fla., were robbed of jewelry valued at $5,000 early yesterday, when bandits ripped the safe deposit vault out of a hotel at which they were staying.

Two rings, including a $2,500 wedding ring, were stolen from Mrs. Julius Weinberg, of 1517 Webster street, the Associated Press reported. Mrs. Morris Whittin, of the same address, lost a diamond-set watch, and a ring also valued at $2,500.

Other guests at the hotel were victims of the robbers' raid, which netted a total loot of more than $20,000.

Three bandits entered the hotel early yesterday, and held up two employes in the dimly lit lobby. They tore out the entire vault of 30 boxes, and escaped in an automobile.

According to the Associated Press, the heaviest loser was Mrs. G. D. Ornstein, of Beverly Hills, Calif., who reported the loss of $500 in cash, and two bracelets valued at $7,500.

Mrs. Weinberg and Mrs. Wittin went to Miami Beach together, and had planned to return to Washington today, Julius Weinberg, local businessman and husband of Mrs. Weinberg, said last night. He added that he had not been informed of the robbery.

Both women are members of the Hadassah organization here.

Guard's Gunfire Halts Escape at Ohio Prison

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 28 (AP).—A guard's gunfire halted an attempted escape today of three Ohio penitentiary prisoners who sought to break through a vehicle stockade entrance.

Warden James C. Woodard said the prisoners were Edmund Pawlinski, of Lucas County, and Joseph Filkowski and John Davis, of Cuyahoga County. None of the convicts was wounded.

Guard August Light, stationed atop a wall surrounding the prison, fired several shots as the men broke through an inner gate.

Warden Woodard said an outer gate was closed and the trio would have been unable to escape should they have reached it. The prisoners turned back, however, when the firing started.

Party Slayer Sentenced.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 28 (AP). Edward Cannon, 27, today was sentenced to a prison term of 20 years to life for the New Year's Eve party murder of Hilda Price, 20-year-old waitress. The State claimed he beat the girl to death when she risisted his advances. His defense was that she fell out of his automobile.

Clashes Mark Secret Service Drugs Hearing

Bureau of Narcotics Has Many Defenders at House Session.

Marked by numerous verbal clashes among committee members, and between them and witnesses, House hearings were opened and closed yesterday on the Doughton Secret Service reorganization bill, which would submerge the Bureau of Narcotics in the Secret Service.

Witnesses representing drug manufacturers, wholesalers, retail pharmacists and reform groups warned the Ways and Means Committee that enactment of the measure would aggravate the addiction problem, jeopardize international regulation of the narcotics traffic, injure the legitimate trade, and, in general, nullify progress made in the last quarter of a century in drug control.

Opponents of the bill, which was introduced in revised form this week by Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, heard yesterday included Roland Jones, jr., Washington representative of the National Association of Retail Druggists; Carson P. Frailey, Horace W. Bigelow and Oscar W. Ewing, of the American Drug Manufacturers Association; E. O. Brockmeyer, Federal Wholesale Druggists Association; Rear Admiral Richard P. Hobson, World Narcotic Defense Association; Mrs. Josephine Junkin Doggett, General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Miss Izora Scott, Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Herbert M. Bingham, representing the National Wholesale Druggists Association, appeared to introduce a brief into the record.

One Defense Witness.

The only witness heard in behalf of the proposed legislation, which would combine all law-enforcement units of the Treasury Department into a master agency known as the Secret Service Division, was Clinton M. Hester, an assistant general counsel of the Treasury.

He argued that the Government's narcotics control branch, now an independent bureau in the department, would lose none of its strength by submergence as a section in the Secret Service Division alongside the Treasury's alcohol tax, counterfeiting and customs branches.

On the positive side, said Hester, co-ordination of these four separate law-enforcement activities under a single head would increase efficiency and obviate overlapping and duplication of criminal pursuit and investigation.

Representative Allen T. Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, chided the witness when the latter declared that the State Department has indorsed the present bill and that the American Medical Association does not object to its substantive provisions.

"That's left-handed approval," scoffed Treadway.

Before the bill was revised, it was viewed with grave concern by the State Department and the organized medical profession, who feared that the narcotics branch would lose its identity completely and America's enviable standing in international regulation of the opium trade would be irreparably damaged.

Personnel Is Provided.

The measure, which provides for a personnel section along with the four others, was changed to give each component unit a sort of subidentity and to preserve the present character and functions of the Bureau of Narcotics.

Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, objected to narcotics control functions being classified under the head of "Secret Service." Representative Claude A. Fuller (Democrat), Arkansas, wanted to know if Harold N. Graves, special assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, is in line for the $10,000-a-year post of chief of the Secret Service Division. Hester said he is certain Graves would not accept the position.

Jones, Frailey, Bigelow, Ewing and Brockmeyer all argued, in effect, that the Bureau of Narcotics is doing a splendid job, domestically and internationally, and that it would be unwise to tamper with this machinery. They pointed out that less than one-half of 1 per cent of the drugs seized each year by Federal authorities is of American manufacture.

Ewing, in response to a question by Representative Jere Cooper (Democrat), Tennessee, vouchsafed that the proposed legislation violates the spirit of the 1931 Geneva agreement and expressed doubt as to the bill's constitutionality.

Prohibition Is Recalled.

Brockmeyer echoed Jones' complaint against tactics of Federal prohibition agents, saying such "mistreatment" is virtually unknown in drug regulation.

Admiral Hobson, famed as the commander of the collier ... which he sank in Santiago Harbor, aroused the ire of Representative Droughton when he referred to "this iniquitous bill." In spite of the chairman's sharp rebuke and demand for an explanation, the retired officer refused to back down and attacked the proposal to place narcotic control in the hands of "counterfeiting specialists."

"The Doughton bills (referring to the original and revised measures) are indefensible and gravely dangerous to vital public interests," shouted Admiral Hobson. "I would suggest as a substitute that you increase by 50 per cent the appropriation for the independent Bureau of Narcotics and put more power in the hands of the fearless, efficient commissioner of narcotics."

2 Seriously Hurt In Traffic Here

Two pedestrians were seriously hurt in traffic mishaps yesterday. Both were treated at Casualty Hospital for possible skull fractures.

Thomas Sheridan, 40, of 1805 North Capitol street, was hit when he started to cross New Jersey avenue between K and L streets northwest. Police said the driver of the car was Noah W. Magowan, 66, of 1403 Eighth street northwest.

Catherine Kaffinas, 60, of 733 Third street northwest, suffered injury near her home. She also received possible rib fractures. Police said the car involved was operated by Melvin A. Braden, 36, of 2615 Twenty-second street northeast.

pointing to the possibility of opposition.

"The time has arrived here when you men in executive positions must live up to your jobs. Get out and do something. Go ahead with your plans, and I, as a member of this committee, will support you to the limit," stormed Schulte.

He concluded by demanding that local authorities "show the opposition who is boss."

His remarks were followed by a moment of embarrassing silence. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, who had testified earlier, glanced around the room. Van Duzer leaned back in his chair.

"We'll do it if you'll assure us of backing," he laughed.

The Indiana Representative, long an advocate of left-turn bans, asked: "What do you think of the left turn—shouldn't it be prohibited?"

"If we prohibit left turns in a congested area" Van Duzer answered, "it would tend to increase the traffic by shunting vehicles onto other streets."

"Then Chicago and New York, with their loop systems, are all wrong? Other cities have eliminated left turns and reduced accidents," Schulte interjected.

"We find that left turns do not cause accidents here," said Van Duzer.

It was suggested by Schulte that Van Duzer continue "experiments at several intersections and compile a report for the committee." He aske Maj. Brown if he would cooperate.

"I'll draw men from outlying sections to enforce the rule, if necessary," answered Brown.

The subject was switched to double-parking trucks. Schulte wanted to know why this practice was not stopped.

"It's a violation, isn't it? And these double-parking trucks cause accidents."

He was told that it was not a violation so long as there was not available space at the curb and the trucks were either loading or unloading.

"But we have no money," the traffic chief added.

The 22-mile-an-hour District speed law came in for a share of Schulte's up traffic.

"Speed makes accidents," Van wrath. He claimed it tended to tie Duzer declared. "Since we inaugurated the system of suspending speeders' permits, accidents have decreased from 900 in December to about 600 this month."

Testifying for the second day, Maj. Brown opened the hearing with a renewed appeal for more policemen. He submitted the following 10-point program for improvements in law enforcement:

1. A continuous education program for both adults and children to make them safety conscious.
2. More thorough examination of applicants for operator's permits and re-examination of drivers at the time of license renewal.
3. A regulation requiring pedestrians to cross at intersections on the proper signal, coupled, however, with additional protection for pedestrians at intersections, either by establishing pedestrian lights or underpasses.
4. Construction of vehicle and pedestrian overpasses at Thirteenth street and Florida avenue and at New York and Florida avenues northeast.
5. Imposition of maximum penalties in aggravated and serious cases of traffic violations, such as driving while drunk, reckless driving and speeding.
6. Establishment of a separate court, to be known as the Traffic Court, presided over by a judge skilled in traffic problems as well as the law.
7. Increased personnel for the police department, to bring about better observance of the traffic regulations.
8. Legal authorization for issuance of traffic violation tickets, which are now issued without authority of law as courtesy to motorists.
9. Abolition of all-night parking.
10. An increase in the motor equipment of the police department.

Inspector B. A. Lamb, traffic supervisor of the Police Department, followed Maj. Brown to the stand. He agreed with his chief's views, adding that a mobile police force is far better than the old beat system.

Millions Saved By Postoffice In Ship Tests

30 Vessels Carrying Mail Have Been Reclassified, Their Pay Reduced.

By the Associated Press.

Postal officials reported yesterday the Administration is saving millions through speed tests given vessels operating under existing ocean mail contracts.

Their statement coincided with another conference of Postoffice and Commerce Department experts, striving to break an impasse which has blocked legislation for a new program of outright ship subsidies. There was no indication when or if an agreement would be reached, although President Roosevelt appeared to be exerting pressure to push through an acceptable bill at this session.

Rates Considered.

The speed tests were ordered after last year's Postoffice Department investigation of ocean mail contracts, which, officials said, disclosed that many ships were receiving higher mileage rates than they were entitled to.

Already, thirty ships of the 300 or so carrying the mail have been reclassified and their pay rate reduced. These reductions alone amount to more than $7,000,000 on the total life of the contracts.

The rate is fixed according to the speed and tonnage of a ship.

A Class 6 vessel—most of those carrying the mail are of that type—must be of 4,000 gross tonnage and capable of 10 knots to receive $2.50 a mile.

The postoffice investigation showed that many ships had been accepted as being in Class 4—$6 a mile—and Class 5—$4 a mile—when they were really only Class 6 vessels.

So far savings of $1,758,936 are being made on an annual basis.

Dollar Lines Cut.

Among the companies whose pay rate has been cut are the United States Lines, Dollar Steamship Lines, Munson Steamship Lines, Lykes Brothers Steamship Co., American Mail Line, Mississippi Shipping Co. and the Waterman Steamship Corporation.

Under the proposed new subsidy system the contracts would be scrapped and the shipping companies given direct grants to enable them to meet lower operating and construction costs of foreign competitors.

Up to last September the Government had paid $156,368,000 to shipping firms on their contracts. It is estimated that if they run their full ten-year course an additional $146,813,000 will be paid out.

Autoist Giving That Name Pays $3 On Charge.

A man who said he was Rex Beach, of Miami, Fla., and who described himself as an executive, appeared at Police Headquarters yesterday and put up $3 collateral on a charge of violating an order on an official sign.

Traffic Division Policeman J. L. Norris, who was described as the arresting officer, said he did not see Beach, but explained the Floridian must have found a ticket on his car.

Georgia Mails Reopened to 2 Talmadge Aids

Postoffice Holds State Tribunals Must Rule On Officers' Status.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Feb. 28.—Holding it is the duty of the State courts to determine Georgia's legal officials, the United States Postoffice Department today reopened the mails to Gov. Eugene Talmadge's de facto officers, named under his financial "dictatorship."

The action of postal authorities at Washington, ordering the release of the mails, followed upon Talmadge's filing of a petition in Federal court here early in the day asking an injunction to force the release.

Funds Roll Into Vault.

The Governor's treasury—closed except for de facto Treasurer J. B. (Tobe) Daniel's office since he ousted Treasurer George B. Hamilton for refusing to pay warrants drawn on this year's funds—was opened today and highway funds piled into its vault.

Talmadge added approximately $3,500,000 in road money from Atlanta banks to the $1,895,000 he withdrew yesterday from the same funds, and about $100,000 from the National City Bank at Rome.

Daniel paid out about $237,000 during the day to various departments and agencies.

Talmadge's chief reason for desiring the release of the mails was to get checks, which he thought had been sent, from counties making tax returns to the State.

Counties under 30,000 population are required by law to pay State taxes to the comptroller general twice each month. Most of the Georgia counties are under that population figure.

"This is the end of the frolic," Talmadge said, upon being informed of the ruling.

No Money Lost Yet.

Letters addressed to the two officers had been held up by Postmaster Lon F. Livingston after Treasurer Hamilton and Comptroller General William B. Harrison, ousted by Talmadge, and the men appointed to succeed them, had demanded delivery.

Referring to reports from Washington that Federal money for State highways may be held up pending a decision on the legality of his removal of the two State officers, Talmadge said:

"Every time I try to be the Governor of Georgia, they raise the cry about losing Federal money, but that money belongs to the people, and we haven't lost any yet."

Guffey Coal Act LegalityChallenged

By the Associated Press.

Constitutionality of the Guffey act regulating the soft-coal industry was challenged in a brief filed with the Supreme Court yesterday by James W. Carter, West Virginia and Virginia coal producer.

His brief was presented preliminary to arguments March 11. The law also has been attacked by Kentucky producers. The cases will be argued jointly.

The District of Columbia Supreme Court, which ruled on the Carter case, held price fixing constitutional, but declared invalid sections of the act regulating wages and hours. The act was upheld in its entirety by the District Court in Kentucky.

$161,863,147 Agriculture Bill Passes House

Appropriation Measure Is Sent to Senate; Fight Likely On Seeds.

By the Associated Press.

A near-record $161,863,147 agricultural appropriation bill for 1936-37 was passed by the House and sent to the Senate yesterday, coincident with a hurried shaping by AAA officials of still-incompleted plans for administering the new farm program.

During the day, Speaker Byrns and Vice President Garner signed the $500,000,000 soil-conservation substitute for the agricultural adjustment act and rushed it to the White House for assured prompt approval.

On still another farm front, President Roosevelt, as an aftermath of his veto of the $50,000,000 seed-loan bill, yesterday issued an executive order allocating $7,000,000 to the Farm Credit Administration for such loans.

The Executive said this money will be supplemented "from time to time by such additional allocations as may be necessary"—but with the stipulation that funds for this purpose not exceed $30,000,000 and that loans to any one borrower be limited to $200.

Nevertheless, the Senate Agriculture Committee, disgruntled over Mr. Roosevelt's veto of the seed-loan bill, named a sub-committee to try to work out a compromise.

A party floor fight shaped up in the House, meanwhile, over the old AAA. The House Agriculture Committee voted to recommend tabling of a resolution by Representative Taber (Republican), New York, asking for the names of benefit recipients of more than $2,000 and the amounts paid them.

The resolution must be acted on by the House, where Republicans planned to denounce what they have complained was payment of big amounts to large landowners at the expense of the little farmers.

The Agriculture Committee coincidentally approved a bill by Representative Gillett (Democrat), Iowa, to continue for two more years the 3½ per cent interest rate on Federal Land Bank notes. Last year's amendment of the farm loan act provided that after June 30 the interest go up to 4 per cent for two years and 4½ per cent thereafter.

The agricultural money measure provides $4,000,000 for the Farm Credit Administration, in addition to the $161,863,147.

Also approved by the Agriculture Committee was a resolution by Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, to instruct the Bureau of Agricultural Economics to furnish "a complete and unexpurgated" report on the effect of the farm program on cotton.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation presents Dr. Edmund H. Fellowes, of Windsor Castle Chapel, at the Library of Congress Friday afternoon in a lecture on "Tudor Church Music," illustrated with recordings by the English Singers and the St. George Singers.

To add to the perplexities of a changing world, scholars are continually revising history. Hardly have we become accustomed to thinking of Henry Purcell as the foremost English composer, when Dr. Fellowes informs us with the emphasis of authority that William Byrd was not only the most eminent musical Englishan but also the greatest of all composers preceding Johann Sebastian Bach, not even excepting Palestrina.

One of his reasons for that estimate is the versatility of Byrd, who did not confine himself to church music, but wrote with equal facility and original power in all the musical forms known in his time. Dr. Fellowes did not go deeply into this matter yesterday, but doubtless he has arrayed all his evidence in his "Life of William Byrd," which, I notice, is to be published shortly by the Oxford University Press.

The superiority of Byrd was not the only surprise sprung by Dr. Fellowes in his quiet way. He also insisted that the Tudor period, from the accession of Henry VII to the death of Elizabeth, was as brilliant in music as it was in literature, and that the effulgence of Shakespeare in a group of extraordinary poets and prose writers is paralleled by the brilliance of Byrd amid a number of remarkable composers. Once the music of that period is as widely known as its literature, he says, there will be no possibility of debating the point.

The lecturer sketched the position and relative importance of several of Byrd's predecessors and contemporaries, such as John Taverner, Christopher Tye, Thomas Tallis, Orlando Gibbons and Thomas Weelkes. Secular music was touched upon only in passing, the burden of the argument being to demonstrate the beauty and viability of Tudor church music, with the aid of some excellently chosen recordings.

Japan's Army May Dominate Foreign Policy

Rebellion Believed More Wide-Spread Than Supposed.

By the United Press.

A belief that the rebellion against Japan's "moderate" government may be much more wide-spread than was supposed—that indeed it may lead to the army's domination of foreign policy—spread here yesterday.

Authoritative reports from Tokyo indicated that persons in power want to relegate the "genro" or elder statesmen, long a check on the ultra-militarists, to a position of impotence and trust government policy to a "strong man." If this is true, the world may soon see a Japanese equivalent of Mussolini, Hitler or Stalin.

Effect of army control on the Japanese government, observers are convinced, would sharpen Japan's relations with its Pacific neighbors. Increased naval rivalry between America and Japan is feared in Congressional circles. But a sharpening of Soviet-Japanese relations would probably be the first result.

Design of Revolt.

Reliable reports from Tokyo said yesterday that a section of the press was reminding the public that it would be useless for Prince Sionji, patriarch of the "elder statesmen," to consult with the Emperor about forming a new government. The press reminded the Japanese people that Wednesday's revolt was designed for the very purpose of breaking down the "genro's" authority.

Editorials urged that Japan establish a truly "national" government under the control of some reliable, trustworthy man. To observers here this meant a nationalist, perhaps an army man.

These editorials, it was believed, represent more than the personal opinion of a writer. The Japanese press has been under a severe censorship for several days. It is hardly conceivable that they would have been printed without authority of the army leaders who now hold Tokyo under martial law.

Political Aims Studied.

It appeared likely that an influential section of the army, while perhaps not approving the terroristic acts of Wednesday, at least is sympathetic with the political aims of the assassins—the suppression of the "moderate" element in Japan which has impeded the army's plans for rapid expansion in the Far East.

It was regarded as significant that the military commanders of Tokyo, with thousands of troops at their disposal, have proceeded so cautiously in putting down the rebellion of a mere 900.

The Japanese crisis had repercussions in Congress yesterday, as Representatives of West Coast States renewed demands for strengthening naval building yards there.

"The slightest spark is likely to ignite the entire world, in view of international friction," Representative John H. Tolan (Democrat), California, told the House Naval Affairs Committee. "If war comes, you know where it will come from. At least we think we do."

privy seal, and Gen. Jotaro Watanabe.

These men were either called out into the snow and shot down, or were slain in their bedrooms.

The government is being conducted nominally by former Home Minister Fumio Goto, who was named acting premier Thursday by Emperor Hirohito.

The rebels held the residence of the slain Premier Okada, the Peers Club, the Koraku Restaurant and the Sanno Hotel. Several American tourists were politely ejected from the hotel.

The rebels are mostly from the first and third infantry regiments of the first army division, known as the Tokyo division. They are led by Capt. Teruzo Ando with four other young officers.

The first and second fleets are guarding the ports of Tokyo and Osaka. The navy is strongly opposed to the rebels, who killed three retired admirals.

for tuberculous and other patients, has reached its limit.

That the visiting staff of physicians and surgeons, who donate their services, is "almost demoralized" because of space congestion, especially in the medical-surgical building.

That X-ray facilities are highly inadequate.

That the department of obstetrics and gynecology, now housed in the main building, finds two delivery rooms insufficient, and would greatly benefit in other ways by having a building to itself.

Board members also stressed the desirability of establishing a diagnostic center, to be housed in the new medical building, around which all hospital services would be centered.

Besides having 300 beds for patients, the medical structure would make suitable provision for medical students and instructors, and offer improved X-ray facilities. It is proposed to give the maternity building a 150-bed capacity.

Several months ago the Board of Public Welfare recommended that Columbia Hospital for Women be made a maternity annex to Gallinger. The plan was frowned upon by many citizens' organizations, as well as the Commissioners themselves. In its letter yesterday, the board explained that this project was its second choice. Between the two schemes, the twin-building project at Gallinger was preferred.

Commenting yesterday upon the more immediate public health concern, the restoration of all or part of the $199,000 stricken from the 1937 health budget by the Budget Bureau, Commissioner Hazen said he will use "every legal and ethical means" to obtain increased appropriations.

He reiterated his willingness to accompany the Ruffin committee in going before the bureau, which is expected to invite the civic group soon, to present its arguments for adequate funds to operate the Health Department and the municipal hospitals.

Texas Strikers Pledge Boycott Of Power Firm

To Use Kerosene Lamps and Wood Stoves; 'Sabotage' Inquiry Opens.

By the Associated Press.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 28.—Organized labor declared economic war against the strike-crippled El Paso Electric Co. tonight, while armed company guards patrolled power lines, and a grand jury began investigation of supposed "sabotage."

The two-day-old strike of union electrical workers moved rapidly into the siege stage, as the company maintained service with nonunion labor.

A mass meeting of 200 organized labor representatives late today adopted a resolution declaring a boycott against the company. Those attending pledged themselves to return to kerosene lamps, wood stoves and ice refrigerators.

E. L. Alexander, president of the Central Labor Union, said the meeting included representatives of "practically all" the city's 53 labor organizations. He estimated the boycott would be observed by "at least" 7,000 union men, families and friends.

The meeting also adopted resolutions condemning the company for its "attitude," and proposing construction of a municipal power plant.

Assurances were given by union delegates that financial and other aid would be extended the strikers.

The company announced employment of 25 armed guards to patrol power lines, in an effort to avoid possible repetition of supposed sabotage, which plunged the city and the Mesilla Valley of New Mexico into darkness last night, for the second time since the strikers pulled switches and walked out Thursday morning.

Five poles carrying high voltage wires were sawed down, halting service nearly eight hours. M. C. Emith, company president, declined to place the blame. Union officials denied strikers were responsible.

City police worked 12-hour shifts. Pickets were on duty at the company's plants and offices.

meeting of the League sanctions committee called for March 2.

"The obligations of member states under Article 16 of the League Covenant is in no way modified or dependent upon the consideration of nonmember states.

"The cause of peace would be much nearer realization if sanctions were extended."

Government officials, commenting on Rome rumors that the Emperor is sick or wounded, said he was in perfect health.

In his message, the Emperor said "the Ethiopian government has not taken and will not take any initiative in the matter of peace proposals.

"Such peace discussions as may be taking place in Europe are without the participation of Ethiopia, and, thus far, there have been no proposals put forward which could be honorably accepted by Ethiopia.

"The fact that the Italians have penetrated Ethiopian territory is causing us no concern, as they have not occupied any important military positions and their advance has increased their lines of communication and offers greater opportunities for guerilla tactics against them."

Academy Head Held in Dispute Over Nude Art

Mural Display at Richmond Brings Corruption of Morals Charge.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 28.—A controversy over the "morals" involved in the display of nude and semi-nude figures in mural paintings here led to the arrest today of John Stewart Bryan, jr., vice chairman of the Richmond Academy of Arts.

The warrant was sworn out by F. M. Terrell, leader of a self-appointed committee, who had warned that action would be taken if the paintings by Mordi Gassner were not removed by noon today.

Bryan was bailed for his appearance in police court tomorrow morning to answer the charge of violating section 4549 of the Virginia code declaring it to be a misdemeanor to keep, sell, distribute or display any obscene books, pictures, etc., which tend to corrupt the morals of youth.

Ultimatum Given.

Bryan had met Terrell's ultimatum that the murals must come down by noon with the brief statement:

"I have nothing to say. The exhibition will be continued."

Terrell, changing his mind in the matter, sought to withdraw the warrant after it had been issued, but it was served on Bryan before he could get it canceled. Terrell explained he was willing to let the matter drop after he learned he could not reach Gassner, a resident of New York.

The paintings, which have been on display here for several weeks, deal with such abstract subjects as the "Ascent of Man." Terrell, serving as spokesman for the protesting citizens' committee, in commenting on the paintings, said:

"If this isn't vice, then there is no such thing as vice."

Pictures Defended.

Gassner, coming to the defense of his art, said in a long-distance telephone conversation from his Long Island home that "only a crass and prurient mind could read vulgarity or indecency into my works of art.

"My pictures may be a little bit extraordinary in one respect as they come at a time when most artists are playing with geometrical forms and I have been trying to create as Dante did. They would have no point if they did not display the unabashed and unafraid naked figure of the Greek."

But Terrell claimed that:

"If there's any such thing as indecency in pictures, it is in those so-called art murals. I feel sure you would not see such in any gallery in the country."

Commonwealth's Attorney T. Gray Haddon, after Terrell's complaint, viewed the pictures, and then commented that a warrant would not be what he would advise.

"I certainly wouldn't issue one myself."

Bill Seeks Marriage Boom.

Boston, Feb. 28 (AP).—A bill to encourage leap year marriages was filed in the State House of Representatives today. The measure would eliminate during June of leap year the payment of the $2 fee charged couples who filed notice of intention to marry.

Hit-Run Driver Sought.

Prince Georges County police yesterday were looking for the driver of a sedan that ran down and killed Jerome Williams, colored, 15, near his home on the outskirts of Bowie, Md., earlier in the day. Robert Brewer, 16, colored companion of Williams, also was slightly injured by the sedan.

Capt. Chisholm, Spanish War Veteran, Dies

Former Organization Leader Was 64; Services On Monday.

Capt. Daniel V. Chisholm, 64, former commander in chief of the United Spanish War Veterans, died yesterday in the Mount Alto Hospital after a short illness.

Born in Columbia, S. C., in 1872, Capt. Chisholm completed his education in that State.

His first military service was in South Carolina as a member of the Richmond Volunteer Rifle Company.

He came to Washington as a young man, and was employed in the Government Printing Office. In the Wilson administration he became deputy public printer.

Enlisting in Company A, Sixth Battalion, District National Guard, he was soon promoted to lieutenant. During this time he was a member of the Emmett Guards Drill Team, which won the interstate match at Little Rock, Ark.

He later transferred to the Morton Cadets and became captain of that company.

At the time of the Spanish-American War nearly all of this company volunteered for active service and were accepted as Company G, First District of Columbia Volunteers.

Capt. Chisholm enlisted as a lieutenant in Tampa, Fla., and was transferred to the staff of Maj. Urell, on which he served as an adjutant.

He also was captain of the Odd Fellows Drill Team, which won many meets both in this country and Canada.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Joanna Chisholm; a daughter, Mrs. Hazel Mann, wife of Maj. Mann, now stationed in Portland, Oreg.; a granddaughter, Joan Mann, and a brother, John Chisholm, of this city.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 1 p. m. from his late residence, 2125 Fifteenth street. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery with military honors.

P. H. Davis Funeral In St. Thomas Today

Services for Patrick Henry Davis, who died Wednesday, will be in St. Thomas' Church today at 10 a. m. Interment will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Davis, born in Washington, March 17, 1864, was appointed an apprentice at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in 1881, and, after nearly 50 years of continuous service, was retired in 1931. He is survived by his widow, Agnes Davis.

Famous Singer Dies

ANTONIO SCOTTI, whose great baritone voice has been applauded in every corner of the globe, died unexpectedly at his home at Naples, Italy.

in his farewell performance at the Metropolitan January 21, 1933.

He sang his favorite role, that of the sinister Chim-Fen, the opium den proprietor in "L'Oracolo."

"I am an old man now," Scotti said shortly before his farewell—he was 67. "I am very sorry to retire—the stage, it is my life—but I want to retire in time. I want to give young people a chance."

Asked if he would take up teaching, he replied: "No. I am too severe. I have heard too many great singers."

Antonio Scotti was unique in years of stardom in opera. He received ovations for 43 years, in every corner of the globe where grand opera is sung.

He was still in his twenty-fourth year when he made his debut at the old Royal Opera at Malta, singing in "Aida."

Previous to that time he had been intended for the priesthood by his parents. He was born January 25, 1866, in Naples, and spent his early life there. His singing in a Naples church attracted interest to his voice.

In 1899 he was engaged by the Metropolitan Opera Company and came to New York, largely through the influence of his close friend, Enrico Caruso.

American opera lovers were devoted to him. On his twenty-fifth anniversary with the Metropolitan, in 1924, the audience stood and pelted him with roses for 12 minutes. But, despite the adulation heaped upon him, Scotti was always modest.

His farewell appearance at the Metropolitan, on January 21, 1933, found him so embarrassed that he said he actually lost his voice during rehearsal. His singing of his favorite role, the villian Chim-Fen in "L'Oracolo," however, was faultless as always.

Dr. Charles Nicolle, Nobel Winner, Dies

Tunis, Tunisia, Feb. 28 (AP).—Dr. Charles Jean enri Nicolle, 70, director of the Paris Institute branch, in Tunis, and 1928 Nobel Prize winner in medicine, died today.

Dr. Nicolle was born in Ruen, September 21, 1866, and was graduated from the University of Paris.

He was the first to modify the original Pasteur treatment for hydrophobia. He obtained better results by cutting down the number of injections and using a stronger serum.

He was made a professor in the Rouen Medical College in 1893 and in 1896 established the first bacteriological laboratory in Rouen.

Dr. Nicolle made exhaustive studies and experiments on typhoid fever germs and his discoveries in this disease won him the Nobel prize.

Rev. Castleman Dies; Funeral Rites Sunday

Retired Rector of Episcopal Church, 78, Was Active in Civic Affairs.

The Rev. Robert Allen Castleman, 78, of Falls Church, Va., died Thursday night in Georgetown Hospital. He had been ill several days of pneumonia. Funeral services will be held Sunday at 3 p. m. in the Falls Episcopal Church where he served as rector for 17 years. Interment will be in the Oakwood Cemetery, Falls Church.

The services will be conducted by the rector Rev. W. Leigh Ribble, assisted by the Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, bishop of Virginia and Bishops F. D. Goodwin and Robert Jett. Services at the grave will be under the direction of the Kemper Masonic Lodge of Falls Church.

Mr. Castleman was born in Harrisburg, Pa., where his father was rector of the St. Stephen's Church. He moved to Herndon as a youth. He was a graduate of the Episcopal High School near Alexandria, the University of Virginia and the Episcopal Theological Seminary near Alexandria.

His first charge was the old Wicomico Church and three others in Westmoreland County, Va. He returned to Herndon, and in 1892 became rector of the Falls Church. He resigned in 1895 to take charge of the churches at Bel Air and Elkridge, Md. He returned to the Falls Church charge again in 1917. He retired in 1931 and has made his home in Falls Church since that time.

He was active in community affairs, and at one time served as town clerk and treasurer. He was an officer of Kemper Masonic Lodge for many years, scout master of the local troup, and a member of the Falls Church Board of Public Welfare.

He is survived by a son, Robert Allen Castleman, jr., three daughters, Miss Mary Lee Castleman, of Falls Church; Miss Roberta Castleman, of New York City, and Mrs. Norman Craig, of Washington, and two sisters, Miss Ida Castleman, of Philadelphia, and Miss Mary C. Castleman, of Baltimore.

Catholic U. Honor Will Go to Eldridge

The Phi Eta Sigma plaque, awarded annually to the freshman at Catholic University receiving the highest average, will be given to Paul K. Eldridge, of 1439 East Capitol street, it was announced yesterday.

The plaque, which is donated by the Very Rev. James M. Campbell, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, will be presented at the initiation banquet of the fraternity on March 9 at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Other Washington students who will be received into the fraternity are Richard E. S. Boss, jr., of 3019 Twenty-fifth street northeast; Joseph E. Draley, of 1215 Kearney street northeast; Theodore H. Ginsburg, of 619 Irving street northwest, and George A. Kerridge, of 3805 T street northwest.

Rites for Mrs. Chapman At Alexandria Monday

Mrs. Jessie Maude Chapman, 72, of 1921 G street northwest, died yesterday at her home. She was the wife of Pearson Chapman, a topographer in the United States Geological Survey.

Survivors are her husband, a sister, Mrs. Minnie Troy; a nephew, Dr. Arthur Parker, and a niece, Miss Edna Harrington. Funeral service wil be at 2 p. m. Monday from the home of Mrs. C. Audbrey Callahan at Alexandria, Va. Burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Nellie West, 67, Dies at Alexandria

Mrs. Nellie Kirby West, 67, died yesterday at Alexandria Hospital. She was the wife of John S. West. He and three sisters, Mrs. Lida W. Greenfield, Mrs. Elsie K. McKeown and Mrs. Mary Winterwerp, and a brother, Arthur Kirby, survive.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. at the Wheatley funeral parlors at Alexandria. The Rev. Robert Masterton, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Ivy Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. McDonald Dies; Widow of Anthropologist

Aided Noted Husband in Work; Author of Several Books.

Mrs. Arthur MacDonald, widow of the famous anthropologist, Dr. MacDonald, died Friday at Garfield Hospital.

For many years, Mrs. MacDonald aided her husband in research work, and spent hours in the Congressional Library. She visited the library shortly before her death to finish some work which her husband had started before his death.

Born in Williamsport, Md., Mrs. MacDonald came to Washington in 1902, before her marriage. Her maiden name was Miss Margaret J. Porterfield.

In 1904, she was married to Dr. MacDonald, and since that time she aided him continually in his work.

She was a past president of the Women's Clinic, a past president and founder of the Women's National Society of Keep-Wells, former publicity chairman of the Political Study Club, a member of the Mary Washington Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

She was the author of a drama, "The Witch," and several books, among them "Keeping Well Physically, Morally and Mentally," and "Reconstruction and Peace Times."

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Culbertson On Bridge

Excessive Courtesy.

The exquisite courtesy exchanged between declarer and adversary on certain hands reminds one strikingly of the Alphonse and Gaston cartoons of long ago. The declarer painstakingly maneuvers himself into a position from which only the opponents or heaven can extricate him. Gallant Gaston, in the person of one of the defenders, gallops to the rescue with shining sword. Their helpless partners, temporarily united under the banner of suffering, smile weakly and commiseratingly at each other, each wondering who is to be the final victim.

Error for Error.

The declarer's four spade contract in the hand shown below was proof against any form of defense except the one he used on himself.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
3 spades	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
4 spades [final bid]

West opened the singleton heart and declarer won with the ace. He then laid down three top trumps and, being disappointed that the jack did not fall, saw no reason to force it out. Obviously he should have done so, in order to guard the diamond suit from trump interference. The defenders then never could take more than two heart tricks and the trump, declarer's ace of clubs acting as an impregnable fortress. But after the three top trumps the diamond was led and overtaken in the dummy. East had to follow to two diamond leads, but on the third round, to his partner's astonishment, he carefully conserved his high trump, discarding a heart. The fourth and fifth rounds found him still with a lover's grip on his beautiful trump. Declarer, feeling he had executed some rare type of coup, discarded losing card after card, eventually conceding the cherished jack of trump and a club trick.

Obviously, had East ruffed at his earliest opportunity, the contract would have been defeated one trick, since only two losing cards could have been discarded.

Budget Disintegration.

The Federal Government is not merely without a balanced budget; its budget-making machinery has virtually ceased to function.

In his January message the President made no attempt to present a comprehensive survey of the financial outlook, with recommendations as to means of covering anticipated deficits. By omitting estimates for work-relief purposes, he managed to balance the so-called regular budget for 1937 with the aid of unexpended balances from previous emergency appropriations. Thus he was able temporarily to avoid grappling with the major problem of deficit financing. Even this incomplete budget statement, however, was thrown hopelessly out of balance, the very day it was presented to Congress, when the Supreme Court invalidated the processing taxes.

Confusion has become steadily greater as Congress has proceeded to vote new expenditures without making any provision for meeting them. As a result we have nothing left but the ruins of a budget that was at best not much more than a pretense. There is pressing need for a full statement of the Government's financial position which would substitute careful estimates for wild guesses as to the probable size of the 1937 deficit. The President should also be prepared to make specific recommendations as to how this deficit is to be covered. Apparently he does not intend to do more than suggest that new taxes should be voted to offset loss of processing taxes and provide a small sum for amortization of bonus payments.

This is a half-hearted method of discharging the President's legally defined obligation to "make recommendations to Congress for new taxes, loans or other appropriate action" to meet estimated deficiencies in budgetary estimates. It may meet the technical requirements of the budget act, but it certainly does not further the real purpose of that law, which was intended to provide for central supervision and control of financial operations in the interests of economy, efficiency and sound fiscal procedure.

Congress is not legally bound to accept the Executive recommendations. But they would be much harder to ignore if they were formally presented as part of a well-balanced, comprehensive financial plan. Instead of trying to shift responsibility for a tax program to a reluctant Congress, obviously eager to avoid action, the President ought to exercise to the full the budget-making powers conferred upon him which embrace revenue as well as expenditure policies.

A Significant Revolt.

The House debate on the proposal to exempt bank stocks held by the RFC from taxation shows very clearly that some of our Representatives are in a mentally befogged state not conducive to rational action. They remained unmoved by the explanation that the RFC is an emergency lending agency established to help banks and other corporations, not to make money for itself. Except for the fact that Congress enacted a law in 1868 permitting the States to tax the stock of national banks, there would have been no doubt about the tax-exempt status of the bank preferred stocks held by the RFC.

The present controversy is concerned with the status of securities held by a Federal agency. It is not, as some Representatives seem to think, a question affecting the issuance of tax-exempt securities. The bank stocks for which immunity was asked and refused by the House would undoubtedly be taxable in private hands. But apparently these distinctions are too fine-spun for some of our legislators who ranted about the need for checking the flood of tax-exempt securities.

At first blush it seems ridiculous to permit the States to tax the assets of a Federal agency established to assist hard-pressed corporations and thus prevent the collapse of taxable going concerns. By helping banks, the RFC has added to taxable values instead of taking them away. Moreover, it was established to preserve lending agencies, not to compete with them.

However, the House debate reveals on occasions the existence of fear that Federal lending agencies will become permanent and that they will develop as tax-exempt competitors instead of helpers of the private agencies. The emergence of the Federal Government as a holder of claims against bank, railroad and insurance companies, and owner of houses, lands and business property is evidently giving Congress food for meditation. Therein lies the major significance of the House defeat of the RFC tax-exemption bill. It is an important, if rather unintelligent, sign of a growing revolt against the extension of the financial and business activities of the Government.

Japan Lifts The Veil.

Americans as a whole are loath to believe that the character of Japanese political thought is what the events of this week have proved it to be. There is in this country a great admiration for the energy, tenacity and ability of the Japanese people. There is an uneasy consciousness of the unnecessary and provocative offense given to Japanese pride by our exclusion act, and in other ways. There is sympathy with the social and economic problems of the overpopulated island empire. And there is much interest in the cultural and philosophic thought of Japan, currently attested by the large audiences which have been listening to Toyohiko Kagawa, the famous social worker now lecturing throughout the United States.

But this admirable national desire to emphasize the best, and ignore the worst, in Japan's national characteristics has now suffered a severe shock. The political assassinations in Tokyo, illustrating a reasoned ruthlessness altogether alien to the dominant sentimentality of American thought, have revealed at a stroke the enormous gulf which actually separates the two peoples. And they have shown beyond the shadow of doubt that it is impossible for this country longer to regard the Japanese as practicing our ethics, or as thinking our thoughts.

It is customary to say that Japan has leaped in two generations from a medieval to a modern state. That is a half-truth of the sort which may be very dangerous. Since the visit of Commodore Perry, Japan has indeed modernized almost every external aspect of national life. But her thinking remains primarily feudal in its sense of loyalties, its political ideology and its moral philosophy. The samurai are still samurai at heart, although the weapons they handle today make the famous two-handed swords of tradition seem merely decorative. The code of the 47 Ronin is still more vital than the civil law.

There is precedent in every country for acts like the cold-blooded sabering of a man as distinguished as Finance Minister Takahashi. There is nothing peculiarly Japanese in the sadistic edict that the body of murdered Premier Okada should lie for hours in the snow where he was shot down. But there is something fortunately unique, from the occidental viewpoint, in the glorification of such actions as essentially laudable, patriotic and noble.

It may be some time before there is a liquidation of what the Japanese military authorities euphemistically call "the disturbances" of Wednesday morning. But what is already appallingly clear is that in all essentials the orgy of assassination has gained its point. Japan will move more firmly under the control of men whose mental attitude is completely feudal, who have supreme distrust of what they would call the vitiating morality of Christianity, who recognize no restraint except those of superior force and their own rigid, but to us alien, code of honor.

The United States, remaining properly appreciative of the finer side of Japanese life, must clearly confront the forces shaping that nation's foreign policy with a realism devoid of sentimentality and wishful thinking. What has happened this week in Tokyo is a portent of an era in the Far East even more stormy than that of the past four years. American policy with respect to the sovereignty of China, the independence of the Philippines, and the growing antagonism between Japan and Russia will now all need sober and thoughtful review.

After a long struggle between nascent democracy and reviving militarism in Japan, the latter seems to have scored decisive victory. There is no sense in pretending any longer that the element now reaching for control in Tokyo has any sympathy whatsoever with the respect for law and democratic procedure which forms the warp and woof of Anglo-Saxon civilization.

Magistrate Courts.

Notwithstanding two criticisms from the chairman of the committee appointed to study court procedure in the District, a bill to establish magistrate courts in Washington will be reported favorably to the House District Committee next week. This lack of unanimity, while unfortunate, does not seriously detract from Corporation Counsel Prettyman's plan of expediting the work of the police and traffic courts, for no one has brought forth a more satisfactory proposal.

The bill provides for courts in four police precinct stations, to be presided over by retired service officers, business men or other citizens of wide experience and sound judgment. To appeal from a magistrate's decision to a higher court, a bond of $10 would be required. It is on this point that the principal objection is raised. Such a requirement, it is said, "would constitute the selling of justice." That is an exaggeration. Some deterrent is required to prevent defendants receiving adverse decisions from appealing automatically to a higher court and thus defeating the whole purpose of the magistrate courts. If the magistrates should establish reputations for fair dealing and the higher courts should consistently uphold their judgments, the emptiness of appealing would become known. Then, perhaps, the necessity for a bond would be removed.

The magistrate court plan is well worth a trial. Other cities have found it successful. The congestion in the police and traffic courts certainly justifies the proposed experiment on the limited basis suggested in the Prettyman bill.

Homes For Workers.

The latest program of low-cost home construction is significant chiefly because it comes from the American Federation of Labor. Oraganized workingmen have enormous stakes in the revival of home building on a large scale. Many thousands are now unemployed in the building trades. Moreover, the housing plans currently discussed are especially designed to benefit the families of workingmen.

In view of this fact there is reason to question the federation's demand that subsidized, low-rental dwellings be built under existing union rules at standard wages. One of the foremost reasons why low-cost housing still lags in this country is the high cost of construction. Excessive wage scales, upheld by the unions, is an important factor in those high costs. If an extensive building program is carried out, largely for the benefit of workingmen and their families, they must necessarily co-operate to make it a success.

Actually a lowering of wages in the building trades, along with reduction of other costs, would redound to the benefit of carpenters, bricklayers, electricians, etc., as well as workmen engaged in the manufacture of building materials. In place of high wages for a few days per month in many localities, they could anticipate steady employment, with larger annual incomes. It may be, of course, that use of the ambiguous phrase "standard wages" means appreciation of the fact that regular income, rather than nominal hourly rate, is most important.

The program outlined by the A. F. of L. is designed to avoid some of the blunders of the Federal projects now in course of development. Not only does it recommend the encouragement of local agencies to carry on this work, but it also points out that these agencies should "raise as much of their capital as possible." One of the most effective contributions to that end would be reduction of costs to a point where municipalities are encouraged to undertake projects heretofore considered beyond their means.

Great Britain's successful housing program has been characterized by a substantial reduction of building costs. That aspect of the problem has been considered far too little in this country. As the A. F. of L. goes deeper into the subject, it may well decide to modify its adherence to deceptive wage scales in the larger interests of the workingman.

Go West, Young Woman.

Today is the logical day to ponder whether or not good Queen Margaret of Scotland knew what she was starting when she gave out her famous decree in 1288. It was then that "ilk mayden ladye of bothe highe and lowe estait" became privileged each Leap Year "to bespeke ye man she likes." Just why dour Scotland should have been the first thus to vary the lightsome business of courtship is not known. Conceivably, the fact that men of that land persist even today in wearing skirts of a sort has some bearing on the matter. In any case, everything about Leap Year is confusing.

To begin with, the name "leap" year would seem to imply that a day has been jumped or skipped. On the contrary Leap Year has one more day than usual. The Egyptians apparently were the first to notice that the rising of the calendar star Sirius advanced one day every four years. So that seed-time and harvest festivals might not gradually move beyond their logical seasons because of this, an extra holiday was added to the Egyptian calendar every four years. From Egypt the custom moved to Rome, where Julius Caesar incorporated it into his revised calendar. Unfortunately, however, in calculating time the Romans counted the year beginning the period as well as the year ending it. The result was that they went along for some time celebrating Leap Year every three years before anyone noticed it.

This raised all kinds of chronological hob, but finally Pope Gregory straightened it out in his calendar which is still used today. But even he was not wholly successful. Thus, while 1892 and 1896 both had February 29ths, 1900, did not. The effect of this has been that persons born, say, on February 29, 1888, today are celebrating their thirteenth birthday. By rights, of course, it should be their fourteenth. Gregory's adjustment did them out of one.

We stray sadly from the edict of good Queen Meg. Mindful of her decree, ladies-in-waiting everywhere have started this year's campaign. Even the best laid plans of mice and maids, however, meet unexpected opposition. In this case, it's the Spinsters' Club of San Francisco, which has come out 100 per cent against Leap Year. According to newspaper reports, too many of their members wander altarward even in normal years. Or is this all a sly publicity stunt devised by Californians to attract that part of the population which was overlooked by Horace Greeley?

Time For A New Party?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The attempt of the Administration working in conjunction with the farm blocs at Washington to circumvent the recent decision of the Supreme Court on the AAA legislation is hardly creditable to those who took a solemn oath to support the Constitution when taking office. There is only one explanation for the enormous subsidies to agriculture and that is the power of the farm bloc lobby in Congress with the solid vote which is supposed to be at its command.

In the first place, there are millions of patriotic farmers like Dan Casement, of Kansas, who are not to be subsidized by the millions of dollars taken by the Government from the pockets of citizens engaged in other industries. But more important than any other consideration is the necessity for striking from the statute books all legislation based upon special privilege.

First of all, the protective tariff should go. Its very existence provides an excuse for similar subsidies to other classes. Incidentally, a free trade policy for America would establish the greatest possible factor for international peace and good will. With abolition of the tariff, all excuse for subsidies and favors given to agriculture, labor or other organized supplicants would be automatically removed. If the Democratic Party remains untrue to its fundamental principle, "Equal rights for all, special privileges to none," then it is certainly time for a new party which will be true to that principle.

Empty Courage.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let not President Roosevelt and Mr. James A. Farley prate of the courage of the New Deal Administration, for the action toward Gen. Hagood shows that they can't take it.

Moreover, it would appear that Mr. Daniel Roper can't take it, since he goes out of his way to dismiss two members of his staff. Yet, Mr. Roper so often pours out his wearisome platitudes via radio of the "vision" and "courage" of the New Deal moguls.

The public notes that many a Democrat in the House and a few in the Senate criticize the Administration for the arbitrary action toward Gen. Hagood, but it also notes that despite all the deplorings and sharp remarks, the great bulk of these Democratic critics line up as regular as usual when roll call comes for any pet scheme of the White House.

Indeed, if there is anything strong about the Roosevelt regime other than its insistence that it is the sole holder of letters patent on plans for the national good, thinking citizens are utterly unable to see it.

An Employe's Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Working for the present Democratic Administration could be compared to military rule. Human beings, the cheapest thing on the market, are driven and terrorized to such a degree that the hospitals are loaded with cots in the center of the corridors. It would be so much more merciful if about half of them were put into lethal pens and exterminated—to meet the fate of the million little pigs. The torture of uncertainty of livelihood, a livelihood which in the main is not specially inviting, boarding houses, movies, other dull people like themselves to come home to.

Every little while the rumor that they are to be discharged with no place to go, and no method of securing another job—keeps each and every one in such a turmoil of suffering, they are indeed wholly malleable material for the mass psychologists to mold.

In the name of whatever good there is, let there be a little kindness, a little mercy shown those terrorized young men and women, caught in circumstances which were being prepared for them 100 years ago at the time of the installation of the first machine. If some mercy is not shown them quickly, they will as quickly cease to care about anything that the machine has to offer. Moral fiber is easily destroyed and rarely regained.

MARION HAVERSHAW.

"We Object."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congressional privilege grants to Mr. Zioncheck the right to harass his colleagues on the floor of the House with the words, "I object." However, when he, in all his bombastic dignity, attempts to frustrate the admirable efforts of The Post in its fight for stringent observance of traffic regulations, then, "We object."

The ultimate purpose of this campaign is preservation of life and limb. It is not a prelude to the obituary of "Congressional immunity."

We will bear with Mr. Gassaway while he demonstrates the intricate maneuvers involved in milking a cow, or, give to Mr. O. Connor pictorial space when that gentleman shows us the Eastern version of "slat-kicking." But, nuts to Mr. Zioncheck on this business of making the streets of the District "unsafe" for humanity.

Prices And Recovery.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to take issue with Mr. Avant, who says in The Post of February 25 that the charges of price-fixing leveled at the present Administration are untrue. If anyone is being unfair, Mr. Avant is. First of all, it is obviously ridiculous to compare 1930 with 1934 as being representative of prices during the two administrations mentioned.

In 1930 we were still riding high on the prosperity wave, but prices and, naturally, wages were coming down from then on. The great sin of the present Administration was to start a campaign to raise prices in the hope that this would bring wages up with the prices. Food was destroyed while millions were in want. More and more relief was needed, and higher prices and higher taxes added to the misery of unemployment and the greatly diminished buying—and earning—power of the people.

When prices were highest in 1934 I could buy a sack of potatoes for $1.50, but in 1935 I had to pay $3. And has Mr. Avant forgotten the striking housewives this past year who even came here to Washington to petition Mr. Wallace please to stop making prices so high that they could not afford to buy meat?

It is all right to be a loyal Democrat, but it is more important to me to be a good patriot, and a good patriot will do what is good for the people as a whole, rather than what is good for the Democratic Party, or any other party, for that matter.

If Mr. Avant would stop being such a good Democrat for a minute and come down to earth he might discover that the present Administration frankly admits its efforts to raise prices. And as long as I have failed to hear any apologies from that corner for the mistakes they have made so far, it is highly improbable that they should admit failure in their noble effort to fix prices so high that only deserving Democrats could afford to eat, and eat well.

Planes and Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: News of the day! President Roosevelt revealed, the other day, he had written a letter to the heads of all South American and Central American governments on the subject of a new Pan-American peace conference. Simultaneously, Chairman McSwain, of the House Military Committee, told the House that Congress should bring the Army's air strength up to 4,000 planes by 1938.

What a contrast—the olive branch in one hand and the bayonet in the other! Nations arm and nations talk peace, but although discouraging in the light of pacifistic developments, I suppose we do have something to be thankful for. At least the peoples today are talking peace, visualizing some day a world where war will be branded the impossible.

Detrimental To Education.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I take great pleasure in informing you that the Parent Education lay leader group of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers desires to go on record as being in favor of the bill H. R. 11375 sponsored by Representative Fred J. Sisson, February 21, 1936.

We feel the present red-rider is detrimental to the open-minded attitude we believe the educational system should develop in our children.

Virginia Southpaws.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A photograph in The Post of February 24 shows five young lady students of the Virginia State Teachers College attempting to throw a silver dollar across the Rappahannock River.

Oddly enough, all five girls appear to be "southpaws." At least, they are preparing to emulate Washington by throwing with their left arms.

B. W. T.

To Simplify The Executive Branch.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the Senate has organized a committee once more to study the simplification of the executive branch, frequently undertaken but never accomplished, it might be well to determine at the outset the practical size and ranking of the various departments and the absorption of the vast number of special boards and commissions outside the departments. Obviously, the situation is loose and muddled.

Perhaps it would be well to recognize the fact that in public opinion and in good sense, only four or five of the departments and two or three of the boards and commissions are important and significant in our national and international affairs. These heads might well be the council and then the entire number of other departments and of the boards and commissions might become the cabinet. Probably State, Treasury, defense (land, sea and air) Justice, transportation (Interstate Commerce Commission, etc.,) are big enough, costly enough and important enough to warrant placing their heads in the council.

Whether or not the council heads should be given rights to appear directly in the Senate is an important matter.

But certainly so much as this is required to meet enlightened opinion—integration of the executive branch, with all loose ends gathered into a unity of control under the President with something of an hierarchy of ranking. It is absurd that the minor departments should be supposed to rank in the public mind with any such departments as State and Treasury and Justice, and almost as absurd to have some boards and commissions that spend and control immense sums and exert immense authority quite independent of the regular executive procedures.

Until something like this is done we shall not have either economy in the national Government or unity of policies. We need each of these now.

The Post Impressionist

Postman's Packet.

Post Office, Saturday.

"IN WRITING a letter to a friend," wrote Emerson, "we may find that we rise to thought and to a cordial power of expression that costs no effort."

* * *

The Post Impressionist had always considered Ralph Waldo rather mealy-mouthed. Since we undertook this Column—and that's nearly two years now—we've known he was. Would he have given expression to such a lovely sentiment if he had been in the position of the Post Impressionist?

Consider the following residuum discoverable in the past week's mailbag.

Richard Jarvis writes us:

"A good deal was made of Poet Laureate John Masefield's sonnet on King George V—more, I thought, than the author made of it. But too few American newspapers have published Mr. Masefield's couplet to Rudyard Kipling when his ashes were buried in the Poets' Corner of Westminster Abbey.

Those two verses run:

"'Your very heart was England's;
it is just
That England's very heart should keep your dust.'"

It is better to write a good couplet than a bad sonnet . . .

Then there is reader P. B. Durrell, of Baltimore's Clifton avenue, who asks us:

"As one engaged in newspaper work during the Columbian Exposition held at Chicago, Cook County, Illinois, from May 1 to October 31, 1893, may I say you are a bit damp in your statement about 'After the Ball' having dated a full ten years before the World's Fair?"

We'll say he may! Everybody else is doing it.

"That ballad," says he, "was the first world-popular song of its sort, because it was sung and played, morning, noon and night, in every concession, exhibit and booth, by people from all over the world while at Chicago at the World's Fair. I don't know why I write to you, as it isn't usual for me to 'write to the editor'—but it does seem that a few survivors should rise on our hind legs and explain to the new generation, as well as we may, what really did happen in 'The Gay Nineties.'"

* * *

Mr. Durrell believes that, just preceding the coming of "After the Ball," those sad dogs, "the boys of Dean's Hill in Patterson," were singing "Those Golden Slippers I'a Gwine to Wear." And that brings back to him earlier recollections: of "leather boots with a patch of red at the tops, a copper plate at the toes"—of "a popular brass oil-lantern, the glass of which was striped with the national colors and lettered 'Blaine and Logan'"—and of marching to the cadence of "No, No, No Free Trade!"

As for Elizabeth Pusey Clark, she wants to contribute to this Column's Whipping Post:

"Nobody — not even the Weather Bureau — knows what the weather is going to do next. Only the other day, the Post's weather reporter reported that 'a sharp fall in temperature was foreseen, the Weather Bureau predicting that it would go as low as 10 degrees above zero'—apparently with no certainty of finding the temperature at the journey's end."

Was it any wonder the pedestrians were being "treated . . . for possible fractured ribs?" Even the recording English was broken.

* * *

B. MacKaye Morse brings this Column as close to partisan politics as anybody can drag it. "Recently," says he, "Harriot T. Cooke wrote to your paper comparing Al Smith with Browning's 'Lost Leader' and quoted:

"'We that had loved him so, followed him, honored him,
Lived in his mild and magnificent eye,
Learned his great language, caught his clear accents,
Made him our pattern to live and to die!'

"I am perfectly willing," concludes Mr. Morse, "to admit the mildness of Al Smith's eye, not to mention its magnificence, though I have never studied that optical organ at close range, but I can find in Mrs. Cook's excellent English style no evidence of her having learned the language to the Happy Warrior."

Yet, at the very bottom of the bag, there's this stimulating inquiry from a commander in the U. S. N., stationed at Annapolis:

"About 18 months ago, you published an article berating the concoctions nowadays served as cocktails. It was the very best article of the kind that I can recall. Would you let me know its date, so that I can replace my lost copy of it? I want to give it to the chairman of the house committee of the Officers' Club here—where, at present, the world's worst old-fashioned cocktail is mixed. They put in all the fruit and flowers available!"

Well, if Emerson were The Post Impressionist, he'd have a file of his columns.

But, alas, he isn't the one—and we haven't the other!

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Hitler's Ku Klux

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 28.

THE capacity of Hitler's Ku Klux cannot be exaggerated, but the fact remains that the bravest people in Germany are excluded from the gang. It takes very little courage to join a racket whose members enjoy the right to cheat and rob the non-members, but the man who defies the mob does so knowing that the Nazis will break him, persecute him and his family, and perhaps kill him.

Of course, the Jews receive the worst hammerin because Hitler is constantly inciting his hoodlums to chase them up alleys, but the Jew has no decision in the matter. But there are thousands of brave, stubborn Germans, Protestants as well as Catholic, who had every chance to accept the protection and the looting privileges which the swastika confers and refused to surrender their principles.

This took physical courage far beyond that which is required of a corner loafer or neighborhood politician raiding a darkened home in the dead of night. It also asked for moral bravery of an even finer kind. For this type of dissenter, as German as beer and as patriotic as old Bismarck himself, undertsands full well that he will be classified as a traitor to his country.

This means that he may be tried before a court of neighborhood ne'er-do-wells on a charge of treason to the land he loves and shot or locked up for the rest of his life without a chance to clear his name. That is the maximum risk, but at the very least he loses his job or his business and is ostracized by fair-weather friends who may secretly admire him but haven't the courage to give him the slightest comfort.

• • • •

ALL this is bad enough, but the test of character is even worse torture if he has a family, because his wife and children naturally will be made to suffer, too. His wife, of course, is doomed to spend the rest of her life cut off from the normal friendships and social relations of her station, and the children find themselves excluded from the playgrounds of the Nazi kids whose pleasures, like those of the little Italian balilla, are entirely warlike.

Thus, in organizing the new Germany, Hitler has drawn heavily on the ranks of the mediocrities and cowards who fight only in packs and automatically denied himself the company of the most courageous people in the land.

It would be foolish to suggest that all Nazis are yellow, although they include all the front-runners in the country, but the highest courage they ever will be called upon to display cannot compare to that of the true German who deliberately chose to defy them, knowing what a lonely, miserable fight he was in for.

• • • •

IT takes one kind of courage to go to war in regiments wearing the badges of patriotism but a better kind to stick it out alone for a principle, deprived of citizenship, reviled as a traitor and subject to night raids by the lowest members of the community.

Sometimes their courage fails and they surrender, and when that happens the Nazis gloat over the vanquishment of brave Germans who reached the end of their endurance.

They had an occasion of this kind a few months ago when Julius Streicher, who made his fortune publishing obscene literature in the guise of a patriotic campaign against the Jews, presided at a dinner for 1,500 political prisoners who had just been released. There were brave and patriotic Germans seated all around him, whose health and determination had finally cracked in prison, but Streicher rose, and, in the role of super-patriot, patronizingly offered to provide railroad fare and passports to Russia for all who wanted to go there.

It is this assumption that anyone who isn't a Nazi must be a Communist which intensifies the difficulty of the nonconforming patriotic Germans. And the fact that none of the guests accepted Streicher's offer was interpreted to mean mainly that 1,500 Communists had just been beaten into submission.

• • • •

IT is perfectly plain that most of the Nazis are Nazis because they are afraid to hold out, and the odor of suspicion and fear pervades their whole life. They are afraid of one another, afraid of the police, afraid of the janitor, the waiter and the housemaid, and they give up money in fear to a hundred rackets as the collectors come around in uniform, with the swastika on the left arm, rattling the cup and thundering the challenge "Heil, Hitler."

Nobody likes to ask what is done with the money, but there is a Nazi commissioner in Munich who was driving a horsecab six years ago, but owns a string of racing nags now. Of course, as in any racket, the boys have to take their chances, and it is possible that they may bag him up in a burlap sack some night and drop him into a grave as they did with 78 members of the mob the night of the big purge.

It is a strange method, Hitler's. He reduced his people to trembling cowardice, told them how brave they were to submit to a few hoodlums and organized a government combining the methods of the Ku Klux and Al Capone.

London Police Ban Attacks on Jews

London, Feb. 28 (AP).—Crown Prosecutor C. M. Melville said today in a London court that he had been instructed by Sir Philip Game, head of Scotland Yard, to give public warning that "Jew baiting" would not be tolerated in London.

"The commissioner of police takes a serious view of this sort of thing," Melville said. "He has instructed me it cannot be too widely known that talk of that sort is not going to be tolerated and anyone who indulges in it must understand he will be arrested."

The prosecutor's declaration came during the trial of Richard Houston, 32, charged with saying insulting words about Jews at a meeting of British Fascists.

Tale Of The Hundred Hours

Chinese Intelligentsia Back Student War Against Japan.

The assassination of Japan's Premier and other high civilian officials reveals the determination of the military to proceed with the conquest of China at any cost and regardless of any opposition, foreign or domestic. Because of the tremendous international significance of this aggressive policy The Post recently requested its Shanghai correspondent to prepare a series of articles analyzing the rapidly developing tension between Japan, China and Russia. The third of these articles, on the activities of Chinese students to thwart Japan's plans to promote the autonomy of North China, appears below.

Shanghai.

SOME day the Tale of the Hundred Hours will be immortalized in China's folklore. Today, Chinese intelligentsia, led by the renowned Dr. Hu Shih, see in it a hope of national salvation and the only barrier between Nipponese imperial ambitions and the country's independence. It is an epic story of 2,500 eager youths, who for 100 hours, despite hunger and the chill of December nights, battled police and soldiery in an effort to protest to the government against the autonomy movement in the north.

Spurred by similar demonstrations in Peiping, thousands of local youngsters invaded the railway station to start a pilgrimage to Nanking. Thoroughly alarmed, the authorities erected barbed wire barricades around the station and strengthened the guard. These failed to stem the stream of students who finally occupied the station, ejecting all passengers and police.

When the pleas of officials and educational authorities failed to have the desired effect on the inflamed youngsters, the railway administration, thoroughly alarmed, decided to take the demonstrators out of Shanghai and "dump" them out at a nearby station.

• • • •

THUS, at midnight of December 24, 2,500 cold and hungry youths of both sexes in two trains found themselves in Quinsan, 30 miles from here. After a long wait the students discovered the engine crews gone and the water tanks emptied. In an effort to "borrow" a locomotive from a passenger train, the students nearly derailed it and were forced to abandon it.

After a thorough search of the town, enginemen were found to man one of the locomotives. The empty tank was filled by the aid of pails relayed from hand to hand. While Shanghai officials were harranguing the students of the other train the first continued its journey.

Early next morning report gained currency that rocks would be placed on the tracks on official orders. Student harriers were sent forward to look for obstructions, while the train followed behind at a snail's pace. Piles of rocks were actually found and removed. Later empty freight cars blocked the way. The locomotive was uncoupled and the cars pushed to a sideline.

In Soochow the youthful crusaders were supplied with hot water, food and another dose of oratory from government, police and educational authorities.

The same afternoon, despite stern warnings from the capital, the train resumed its journey west. Early next morning it reached a section from which rails had been removed. The rails were found, one of them in a water-filled ditch, and fixed. The students were joined by several railway workers, who refused payment for the job, declaring that they were "also patriotic."

• • • •

BEFORE the train reached Wusih, the "Vénice of China," about 80 miles from here, the students were obliged to repair the tracks several times. In some cases rails were removed from behind the train and put ahead. In Wusih the students were once again given bread, hot noodles and more warnings. In the afternoon they again resumed their journey.

In Kaochiao, a little village three miles from Wusih, the students encountered a railless section, guarded by a strong force of soldiers. An armored train slowly pushed the students' locomotive back to Wusih. In the evening the students made another attempt to break through to Nanking, but had a collision with a train bearing Nanking officials. About 20 of the youngsters were injured. When the students' train limped back to Wusih, and they invaded the city shouting patriotic slogans, the authorities promptly removed the locomotive.

With the train gone and a large military force surrounding them, the students decided to surrender and return to Shanghai. Their colleagues who could not get beyond Quinsan, were already back in the city.

Thus ended the March of the Hundred Hours. Its echoes reverberated in every corner of China. In far-off Kaifeng thousands of students pitched tents on railway tracks, awaiting trains to take them to the capital. In Hankow, 6,000 students staged continuous demonstrations of protest against the autonomy movement, "traitors," and Japan.

In Nanking, thousands of students broke through police lines to present petitions to government leaders, while others marched to the gigantic mausoleum of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, China's George Washington, to "weep tears of shame," as a Chinese paper put it. In Canton scores of youngsters were shot down by the police, who, spurred by Japanese warnings, sought to break the demonstrations. Some students declared a hunger strike, while 500 others, armed with revolvers, barricaded themselves in university buildings.

In Swatow, thousands of students paraded in the public parks shouting anti-Japanese slogans. The murder of a Japanese policeman by an unknown assassin enabled Tokyo admirals to send warships to the port, while the consular authorities, linking the assassination with the demonstrations, lodged a demand for the immediate suppression of anti-Japanese agitation.

• • • •

THE Nation's first demonstrations were held in Peiping on December 9, when the police fired volley after volley into the ranks of parading students. Scores of youngsters were shot, scores of others were thrown into jail on charges of communism, while hundreds were severely manhandled by zealous policemen. The demonstrations bore a marked anti-Japanese and anti-military character, with the students passing resolutions calling for a "holy war" on Nippon.

Japanese newspapers vied with officers in blaming the riots on the Khomintang, China's ruling party, the so-called pro-American clique in the Chinese government, and the naughty communists. Some even suggested that a protest be filed with Washington against the participation of the students of the American-financed Yenching University in the demonstration.

Peiping was the only city in which faculty members joined the student movement, Drs. Hu Shih and Chang Mo-lin, both American-educated, being especially active. The latter was invited to the Japanese military headquarters and advised to "calm down." Up to this moment he has not.

Students in Peiping and Tientsin also attempted to "nationalize" trains to carry them to Nanking, but fared even worse than their confreres in Shanghai. Undaunted, some 400 of them are now treking through the snow-carpeted fields of North China to the capital, speechmaking in every town and hamlet through which they pass.

THE seriousness with which both The Chinese and Japanese governments are viewing the student movement is indicated by the declaration of martial law in Shanghai, Hankow, Nanking and Canton, and the warnings filed by the Japanese with authorities in Peiping, Nanking, Swatow, Hankow and Canton. In the last two cities the warnings took the form of ultimatums—"Either you end the demonstrations or else . . ."

The concern with which Tokyo is watching the student movement is very real. Youthful patriotism has cost Japanese traders hundreds of millions of dollars in the past 15 years. Boycotts organized by students in retaliation for real or imaginary grievances dealt hard blows to Nippon in 1921, 1927 and 1931-33. Japan, which has at last, after 20 or 30 years of thwarted ambitions, realized her dream of being the dominant power in the Far East, cannot allow now a few thousands of reckless youngsters to imperil her destinies.

Nanking, at the same time, sees a double menace in the student demonstrations. If the movement spreads Japan will hold the Chinese government responsible and seek further concessions, political or economic. On the other hand, there are indications that the student movement might at any moment develop from a fly in the Japanese ointment into poison for Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's government. In a country where national consciousness is not yet deeply rooted, the students are the only organized and articulate group. This explains why the authorities are handling them with velvet gloves, at least publicly.

• • • •

HAND-PICKED representatives of larger schools throughout the country were brought to Nanking in the middle of January to receive Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's assurances that "the government will not sign any agreement derogatory to China's territorial and sovereign rights, nor will it consider signing any secret agreements."

The students were at the same time invited to confer with high government officials, "to afford," as an official news agency put it so delightfully, "proper channels for free expression of views instead of resorting to public demonstrations." The students presented a series of demands, which included the suppression of the autonomy movement in North China. It is doubtful, to put it mildly, that the government will follow the youngsters' suggestions, if only because of their utterly utopian character.

The Nanking conferences had little effect on the student movement, the demonstrations continuing throughout the land with unabated force. The hand of communists was undoubtedly responsible for a measure of the movement, but it is naive to shoulder them with entire blame for the anti-autonomy and anti-Japanese agitation.

In the coming turbulent weeks and months, the students will share the limelight with Kwantung Army officers and notrthern autonomists. officers and northern autonomists. Tokyo will watch them with anxiety, anticipation, Chinese patriots with hope. But, to neutral observers they appear to be doomed to a sad fate under the steam roller of Japan's "manifest destiny."

Readers Serious

Book Publisher Talks.

MR. DALE WARREN has gone back to Boston. That in itself, I know, is not news; but some months from now its significance may become known, I wouldn't say for sure, knowing something about publishers as I do, but I rather suspect the large bag he was carrying out of Union Station yesterday was brimming with manuscripts. For Mr. Dale Warren is a publisher and he had just ended two days among the literati of the National Capital seeking, I think, enduring literature about this changing scene.

Mr. Dale Warren is a tall man who went to Princeton—all Princeton men are tall—and who has acquired a beautiful broad "A" through long residence in the one-time Athens of America. His activity and enthusiasm for the belles lettres belies the oft-spoken canard that Boston publishers are bent and bearded old men who dodder about with green baize bags filled with copies of Emerson and Thoreau's works.

As publicity man for, and one of the editors of, that ancient firm, Houghton Mifflin Co., which has been publishing books Lord knows how long, Mr. Warren has been flitting about the country checking up on his known authors, and drinking tea with the white hopes. He wouldn't say what great works he had discovered hereabouts, but his eye gleamed and his bag bulged. I know that if he gets one of the books he was talking about he ought to have a best seller, but he swore me to secrecy, alas!

• • • •

TALKING about books and authors is what Mr. Warren does best. When one is able to lure him away from telling about the times he had with H. G. Wells in London or the Abbey Players in Dublin he is able to talk, as we say here in the South, right smart about what's going on in this country.

Here are a few of his observations:

The American reading public is now more serious minded than it has been in a long time. As evidence of this he mentioned the surprising commercial success of "The Last Puritan," George Santayana's first novel. This book, said Mr. Warren, is one of the great surprises of the publishing business. Written by an aged philosopher, it is a slow-moving study of a boy's life. Although there is murder and suicide and sex in it they are subordinated to the beautiful prose for which Mr. Santayana is famous. It's as different from "Anthony Adverse" as can be, yet it has sold more copies in a short time than that amazing outburst of romance was able to do. Mr. Warren is very sorry his company doesn't publish Mr. Santayana's books.

The American reading public is avid for studies about its own country. Mr. Warren mentioned "It Can't Happen Here," a best seller, as evidence of this. But he said that sectional novels, books about the soil and the people who have sprung from the rich American countryside, are just as popular as studies with political motives. He had dinner the other night with a New Dealer, a newspaper columnist, and a couple of Communists, he said, and they all agreed that Americans are hungry for books about themselves. Serious books, which dig into causes and discuss trends. But he, the publisher, said these books had to have something else.

At all times those who read books want, above everything else, to be entertained. They want to take their education, perhaps not with sugar coating, but with spice. Such books are Negley Farson's autobiography, or Walter Duranty's espousal of communism through the frank discussion of his own life, are typical of the kind of books that will sell well. In other words, Mr. Warren said, if books are written out of experience and then tinged with imagination they will click with those who go to book stores and libraries.

WASHINGTON is a good book-selling center, he said. It is better now under the New Deal than it was in other regimes. He didn't know the reason. All book business is better, he said, everywhere. So, perhaps it is not only the hordes of experts, college professors and consultants who have flocked to Washington that have helped sales here.

One book on Mr. Warren's list that he thinks will be welcome in Washington is Herbert Agar's and Allen Tate's compilation called "Who Owns America?" It is a book which covers an amazing number of subjects, from property as the basis of liberty, to discussions of art, life on the farm, Europe, and that inevitable chapter called "Modern Woman." It even has a chapter called "Whither Europe," in case you are interested. The book will be out later in the spring.

Mr. Warren is firmly convinced that any country as turbulent as America is today ought to be producing lots of good literature.

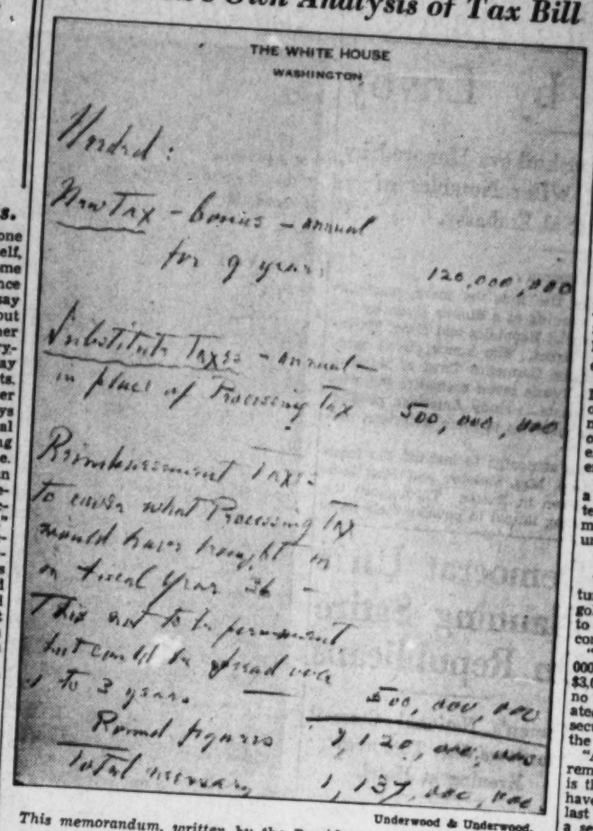
"In fact, it is," he said. "There have never been more or better writers than there are now." That, from the representative of one of America's oldest publishing houses, ought to count for something.

Griffith, Film Director, Gets Kentucky Divorce

La Grange, Ky., Feb. 28 (AP).—David Wark Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation" and other films, was granted a divorce today from Linda Avidson Griffith, to whom he was married in Boston 31 years ago. They separated in 1911.

The divorce was granted by Circuit Judge Charles C. Marshall. Griffith, a native of this rural community, was not in court, but was represented by his attorney, J. Ballard Clark. Griffith brought the suit December 26, under a Kentucky law permitting a divorce when a couple has been separated more than five years.

Roosevelt's Own Analysis of Tax Bill



THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Memo:

New Tax - Bonds - annual for 9 years 120,000,000

Substitute Taxes - annual - in place of Processing Tax 500,000,000

Reimbursement taxes to cover what Processing Tax

in Fiscal Year 36 -
This not to be permanent but could be spread over
4 to 3 years

Normal figures 2,120,000,000
500,000,000
Total revenue 1,137,000,000

Underwood & Underwood.

This memorandum, written by the President, was used by him to explain the proposed tax law at his press conference yesterday.

Tax Plan Shocks Congress

the Government. It was estimated that the amount returned was between $250,000,000 to $300,000,000, which would make the tax 50 per cent or more. He did not suggest a method by which the "windfall tax" could be collected.

Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee said that his committee would start hearings on tax legislation next week and predicted that the hearing would last ten days or two weeks. He said that it would take a week or two to write the bill.

Doughton Plainly Perturbed.

Doughton was plainly perturbed by the President's request.

"If the President proposes that," he said when told of Mr. Roosevelt's announcement, "I suppose we can get something like it out. We have done it before."

The Ways and Means chairman said that he supposed something besides processing taxes must be provided, but he said that he still hoped that the main part of the revenue could be raised in this way. He added that, of course, the House might decrease the amount of taxes requested in the bill.

Doughton was among the House and Senate leaders who discussed taxation with the President at the White House Thursday night. Following the conference those who attended said that no definite figures had been presented to them. Representative Hill (Democrat), Washington, who attended the White House conference, insisted he had not seen the figures until they were given him by newspapermen following the press conference at which President Roosevelt revealed them.

Sees Bonus Tax Opposition.

Hill said he foresaw considerable opposition to a tax to raise bonus money.

"Those who want to pay it with new currency will be right on the job," he said.

Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, said that he anticipated no trouble in enactment of the bill.

"We are going to try to consider it in a wise and constructive way, without affecting the progress and upturn of business," he said.

Representative Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, majority leader, said that "we'll have to pass the bill."

"We can't go on forever with all outgo and no income to offset it," he said. "The President has made up his mind to balance the regular budget and he is going to do it."

Representative Snell (Republican), of New York, minority leader, remarked:

"I'm glad the President has come to some conclusion, anyway."

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said it "ought to be easier to stop the Passamaquoddy power project and the Florida ship canal." He has been fighting both projects, financed with relief money.

McNary Withholds Comment.

Senator McNary (Republican), of Oregon, majority leader, merely said that he would scrutinize the forthcoming bill very closely.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, expressed no surprise at the size of the request.

"I can't understand why anybody should be shocked or alarmed at new and excessively heavy taxes," he said. "You can't spend money without levying taxes. It has been apparent since the large spending program started that sooner or later a drastic increase in taxes would follow."

Walsh said that he believed that eventually it will be necessary to levy such sweeping new income taxes as have been suggested by Senator LaFollette (Progressive), Wisconsin. He said that it will be necessary to increase the taxes on the middle classes, "the only group left with a large volume of income."

Senator Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, said he would join La Follette in attempting to broaden the income tax and that he would attempt to have excess profits taxes increased. He suggested lowering exemptions from $1,000 to $800 for single persons and from $2,500 to $1,200 for married persons.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, expressed the opinion that it might be a good idea to save the necessary money by cutting expenditures.

Roosevelt Discusses Program.

Anticipating questions, President Roosevelt, opened his semiweekly press conference with a discussion of his revenue program. He said he had set forth the needs of the Treasury clearly to Congressional leaders Thursday night. He pointed out that the needs are twofold and that they had not been provided for in the budget message of January 6.

The budget message, he said, contemplated a balanced budget except for relief. He said that in spite of unanticipated occurrences (passage of the bonus bill and the AAA decision), his objective was to end the present session of Congress with a balanced budget for expenses other than relief.

Payment of the bonus now, instead of in 1945, Mr. Roosevelt said, will cost the Government an additional $120,000,000 a year for the next nine years. The ordinary budget includes $160,000,000 a year for bonus amortization, bringing the total cost to $280,000,000 a year.

The President was emphatic in insisting that the only new taxes he was recommending were the taxes to raise $120,000,000 a year for the bonus. He insisted that the additional $1,000,000,000 needed for the farm program and to reimburse the Treasury was not new money but money that would have been raised anyway had not the Supreme Court invalidated the AAA.

Must Reimburse Treasury.

The Treasury, he said, will be out of pocket $1,017,000,000 during the present and the comieg fiscal year as a result of the decision. He insisted that the Treasury must be reimbursed for this loss. It must, he said, be placed in the same position it would have been had the AAA decision not been handed down. He repeated that taxes for this purpose would not be new taxes, that they would be the same amount as would have been raised under the old law.

It seems fair, he said, that taxpayers who had taxes returned under the decision should be put on the same footing as taxpayers who paid. He then suggested his "windfall tax" proposal, a special tax on those who received a "windfall" by return of the processing taxes. He said his objective was to obtain the money from the beneficiary of the court decision, whether it be the processor or someone to whom the processor has passed the money on.

He added that the percentage charged against recipients of the "windfall" would be very high. He explained, in answer to a question, that he had been informed that such a tax could be legally collected. Asked if he did not think it would be tied up in the courts, he suggested that his questioner consult a clairvoyant.

Previous Decision Cited.

Elsewhere it was explained that such a tax might be upheld under a decision several years ago in the case of Hoe vs. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Involved in the case was the question of whether one class could be separated from another class of taxpayers and subjected to a different rate of income tax. The tax law had provided that rates of 30 per cent, 65 per cent and 80 per cent, according to classification, should be applied to excess profits accruing to taxpayers from war contracts with the Government, while the applicable rates to other excess profits were 20 per cent and 40 per cent.

The taxpayer contested the separability feature on the ground that it was an unreasonable exaction and that to be valid there must be a reasonable segregation of taxpayers. The court declared it had no doubt the classification was a justifiable one and that the act was constitutional.

Passing from the "windfall tax," President Roosevelt discussed replacement of the processing taxes. About $500,000,000 can be replaced as a permanent tax in some form, he said. He added that this would take the place of the old processing tax and would cover needs for 1937 and thereafter.

At the same time, he added, the Treasury still would be shy this year's tax. He said he was not favorable to retroactive taxes, although he believed they would be constitutional. He said he felt such taxes would work a hardship. Therefore, he suggested, Congress should enact a $500,000,000 temporary tax to reimburse the Treasury for its loss. He said this tax could be spread over one to three years.

The President concluded by declaring that neither he nor the Treasury would make any recommendations as to the form the taxes should take. He said that 10 or 12 different kinds of taxes are possible and that there could be various combinations of these. He added that the "windfall tax" probably would be an income tax on a special kind of income. He added that the taxes would go to the general fund and not be earmarked for a specific purpose.

He expressed the hope that his tax program would not prolong the session of Congress.

Bank Reserve Boost Is Urged By U. S. Board

Council Wants Increase in Requirements; Credit Warning Is Given.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—The Federal Advisory Council made public today recommendations that the Federal Reserve Board increase reserve requirements of member banks.

The announcement was made by Dr. Walter Lichtenstein, secretary of the council in Chicago, with the notation that it was "by agreement of board of governors of the Federal Reserve System and the Federal Advisory Council."

On February 12 the council sent a letter to the Federal Reserve System covering the reserve requirement recommendation, kept secret until today.

Warning Is Given.

Warning against "a credit structure being built on that part of the gold holdings which may be deemed to be transitory or temporary," the communication said:

"Of the slightly less than $6,000,000,000 of reserves, approximately $3,000,000,000 of which are required, no less than $2,400,000,000 were created by purchases of Government securities in the open market by the issuance of reserve bank credit.

"A very large percentage of the remainder of the reserve structure is the result of gold imports which have come into the country in the last two years, not as the result of a settlement of trade balances, but largely for protection against unsettled conditions in other countries, and partly for speculative purposes. The gold holdings thus acquired may be largely transitory and temporary."

Called Unwise.

After mentioning the "transitory and temporary" gold holdings, the letter said:

"The council is of the opinion that it would be unwise and unsound to permit a credit structure to be built on the base of reserves so created.

"The council is so deeply impressed with the necessity for prompt preventive action in order to avoid the possibility of the building of a credit structure on the reserves as at present constituted, that it recommends to the board at this time a substantial increase in the reserve requirements for member banks.

"This increase should be at least large enough to prevent a credit structure being built on that part of the gold holdings which may be deemed to be transitory or temporary."

Board Is Considering.

"The council is still strongly of the opinion expressed in a recommendation made to the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system on November 21, 1935, that there is no need at this time to put into force regulations affecting collateral loans made by banks."

By the Associated Press.

Federal Reserve Board officials said yesterday the board was "considering" the suggestions of the Federal Advisory Council that excess reserves of the system should be reduced.

Officials said the board had notified Walter Lichtenstein, secretary of the council, that it had no objections if the recommendations of the council were made public. They advised increasing legal reserve requirements as a means of curbing the credit inflation potential in $3,060,000,000 of excess reserves.

There was no indication of when the board might reach a final decision.

Revolt in Chile Fails; 15 Arrested

Santiago, Chile, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—The government today frustrated an attempt by a group of civilians and former army officers, led by former Capt. Raimundo Poheler, to seize control of the army, and arrested 15 of the ringleaders.

The planned coup was staged at noon, when the group entered the war office, opposite the Palacio de la Moneda, and took control of army headquarters. The plan was to capture Gen. Oscar Novoa, commander in chief, but he already had left the building.

The rebels remained in control of headquarters until arrival of a group of traffic policemen, who aided in placing them under arrest.

The government, forewarned of the plot, set a trap and awaited arrival of the group. No effort was made to apprehend them until they had entered the war office.

Guards had been strategically posted, and as soon as the rebels were inside the guards blocked escape.

Swiss Defend Nazi Ban After German Protest

Geneva, Feb. 28 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—The action of the Swiss Federal Council in banning all Nazi organizations in Switzerland, was "entirely in consonance with Swiss sovereignty," the government said today.

The statement was made in an official reply, handed Ernst von Weizsacker, German ambassador, to a Nazi protest against the council ban.

The Swiss Federal Council ordered the abolition of all Nazi organizations in Switzerland, after the assassination of Wilhelm Gustloff at Davos, by David Frankfurter, Jewish medical student. Gustloff was the Nazi organizer in Switzerland.

Soviet Cosmetics Heads Entertained by Envoy

Mme. Molotov and Miss Shaposhnikova Honored by Russian Ambassador and Wife; Notables of Capital on Guest List at Embassy.

By Dudley Harmon.

Two ladies whose job it is to make the Russians more cosmetic-minded were the guests of honor last evening at a dinner given by the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Troyanovsky, at the Embassy on Sixteenth street. The honor guests were Mme. Viacheslav Molotov, president of the Cosmetics Trust of Moscow, and Miss Ludmilla Shaposhnikova, who heads seven cosmetics factories in Leningrad. They came here from Russia to study American production methods and to arrange for the importation of some American machinery.

Since the Soviet government started a campaign to instruct the feminine population in the art of making-up, Mrs. Molotov and Miss Shaposhnikova are two of the busiest women in Russia. Throughout the land of the Soviets, farm women are being taught to powder their noses correctly and to rouge their lips.

The two women are renewing their acquaintance with Washington after a first short trip to the Capital made over a week ago. On their last visit, Mme. Molotov and Miss Shaposhnikova were luncheon guests of Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House. Conversation at the luncheon was carried on in German with Mme. Troyanovsky acting as interpreter.

Besides being important in her own right, chic, handsome, Mrs. Molotov is the wife of the chairman of the council of peoples commissars of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

"This position corresponds roughly to that of prime minister in England," said one of the Soviet secretariat yesterday. "It means that Mr. Molotov is executive head of the entire Soviet government."

Mme. Molotov and Miss Shaposhnikova will linger at the embassy for a few days, then start again on their visit of inspection.

Guests at dinner last night were: The Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun, the Minister of Latvia, Mr. Alfred Bilmanis; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Senator and Mrs. Robert Bulkley, Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo, Mrs. William E. Borah, Representative Caroline O'Day, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Miss Josephine Roche; the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Hines Woodring, the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. M. L. Wilson, the Director of the Bureau of Standards and Mrs. Lyman Briggs, the President of the Export-Import Bank and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, the Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and Mrs. James M. Landis and the Iranian Charge d'Affaires, Mr. Hossein Ghods.

Also the Consul General of the U. S. S. R. in New York and Mme. Arens, Mr. Joseph Baird, Mr. V. K. Bogdan, Vice-President of the Amtorg Trading Corporation; Dr. and Mrs. Frank Bohn, Mr. Ivan Boyev, Chairman of the Amtorg Trading Corporation; the Military Attache of the Soviet Embassy and Mme. Burzin the Assistant Military Attache of the Embassy and Mme. Begunov, Mr. Gregory Gokhman, the Second Secretary of the Embassy, and Mme Gregory Grigoriev; Mr. and Mrs. Alex Gumberg, Mr. Robert F. Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. Earl L. Packer, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Vladimir Romm, Mr. and Mrs. Luke Wilson, and the Naval Attache of the Soviet Embassy, Capt. Alexander Mikhailovich Yakimichev.

D. C. Girls Honored At Mary Baldwin

Receive Scholarship Rewards at School.

Four Washington girls attending Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Va., have received scholarship honors recently. Miss Nancy Wallace, of Wilmington, N. C., and Washington, was initiated into the Honor Society this week. Miss Wallace is president of the senior class and a member of the President's Forum. She has been a varsity debater and a member of the newspaper staff since her freshmen term.

Miss Wallace and Miss Imogen Bird, both, made high honors for the first semester of this year. Miss Bird became a member of the Honor Society last year.

Miss Mary Delia Nichols and Miss Emily Ann Sparks also made honors in the first semester. Miss Nichols is president of the Student Government Association and a member of the newspaper staff. Miss Sparks is a freshman and is temporary chairman of her class this year.

Miss Anne Franklin Harrison, of East Falls Church, Va., was also on the honor list.

Austin to Address Republican Women

Will Discuss 'Current Legislation' on Monday.

Senator Warren R. Austin, of Vermont, will be the guest of honor and speaker at the meeting of the League of Republican Women on Monday, at 2:30 p. m., in the Italian garden of the Mayflower Hotel. Senator Austin will speak on "Current Legislation." Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, president of the league, will preside.

Mr. Ray L. Hoff, of the Department of Justice, gave a talk on original records of the District of Columbia at the league's headquarters yesterday morning. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley was the sponsor, and Mrs. Warren Haines was hostess at the luncheon which followed.

Mrs. L. F. McMillin To Address Club

Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin will be the guest of honor at the luncheon of the Woman's National Democratic Club Monday. Mrs. McMillin, who is a member of the Civil Service Commission, will discuss the work of the commission.

Democrat Unit Planning Satire On Republicans

Women's National Council to Stage Skit Tomorrow Evening at Hotel.

Members of the Democratic Women's National Council will satirize the Republican Party in a political skit entitled "Candidates and Cauliflower," to be given tomorrow evening at the Burlington Hotel in connection with the national donkey bank roundup. The banks, in the shape of donkeys, were distributed to Democrats all over the country to raise funds for financing the work of women in the campaign.

The skit will be preceded by a short address by Miss Mae Helm, assistant corporation counsel of the District, and first president of the Democratic Women's National Council. The program will open with community singing of "Donkey Banks," written aspecially for the occasion to the tune of "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Mrs. Arthur D. Condon, president of the council will preside. Dr. Frances Moon Butts, vice president, will be hostess for the occasion. Miss Virginia Richel is diretcor of the skit and Miss Bonnie Daynes is in charge of the music. She will be assisted by Mrs. Alexander Bentley.

The scenery used will be the replica of the White House which was used in a skit at Mrs. Roosevelt's "Gridiron Widows" party in December at the Executive Mansion.

Washington Ski Club In Contest Tomorrow

Competitions in Slalom and Informal Downhill Racing Will Be Staged at Glencoe, in Pennsylvania.

Competitions in slalom and informal downhill racing will be staged tomorrow by the Washington Ski Club, which is growing bigger and better in spite of approaching spring. Members of this club, who have increased in number from 20 to 80, go each Sunday to ski at Glencoe. This is a little mining town high up in the Pennsylvania hills, where the snow, it would seem, is almost perennial.

Mr. William Davies, New Dealer and expert skier, who "cut his teeth" in this sport in the mountains of Germany, is going up ahead of time to lay out stakes for the slalom racing. This type of skiing consists in maneuvering a course downhill between stakes planted in the snow. In addition to the slaloms, there will be informal downhill races for those not quite so expert.

Tomorrow for the first time members will ride to Glencoe in a special train all their own. It pulls out of Union Station at 8:15 in the morning, and gets back to Washington shortly after 10 that evening.

Special Train Features.

"The special train enables us to get there in less time than when we traveled in a car attached to the regular train," said Mr. Waldo Holden, organizer of the club. "Thus we can spend more time in the mountains."

The snow which lingers only in faint traces on the streets of Washington is almost 2 feet deep in Glencoe, according to Mr. Holden. The Ski Club is planning to continue its trips all through the month of March, and already is laying plans for next year's organization.

Last week a party of Glencoeites went up on Saturday and spent the night there. The evening of their arrival they joined the natives of the little mining town in a program of square dancing.

The dances were held in the main store, and fiddlers, some of whom had walked 10 miles through the snow to be present, scraped away while a fellow townsman called out the figures. Washington talent was enabled to hold its own with the miners and their wives, thanks to the weekly classes in square dancing which several of them attend here in Washington. These dancing classes were organized last year by Miss Caroline Huston Thompson and Miss Olivia Stokes.

Maj. Heywood Present.

The latter was among those who went on last week-end's expedition, accompanied by her brother, Mr. I. N. S. Stokes. From the German Embassy came Herr Gustave Struve, Third Secretary. Also present from the diplomatic set was Maj. Henry Heywood, Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy, and Miss Elsie Ekengren, daughter of the late former Minister of Sweden to the United States, and a skier of note.

Others who went to Glencoe were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, Mr. William Moore, who never misses a trip; Mr. Waldo Holden, Miss Barbara Wright, Mr. Albert Stephan, Miss Elizabeth Morrison, Miss Eileen O'Daniel, Miss Lois Jameson, Mr. Charles Smoot (another expert), Mr. Luke Wilson, Mr. H. A. Maloney, Mr. Robert Wilson, Mr. Wallace Parks and Miss Peggy Angel.

Society Makes Plans for Blind Benefit Show

President's Mother Will Pour Tea at Affair March 11.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, is expected to arrive in Washington March 10, to be a guest at the White House for several days.

She will pour tea at the fashion show and tea to be given for the Library of the Blind on March 11 at the Willard Hotel.

Mrs. Elihu Root, jr., also will come to Washington from New York to pour tea at the benefit fashion show. Mrs. Root will be the guest of Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman during her stay.

Mrs. Eugene Roberts, the former Countess Cornelia Szechenyi, is chairman of the young matrons who will model gowns from well known houses in Washington, and Miss Beatrice Phillips, daughter of the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips, will be in charge of the debutantes who will model. Mrs. Charles W. Short is in charge of all arrangements.

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman will be in charge of a tableaux which will show the 12 hours in the life of a debutante.

TWO ON SAFARI

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Ballard Mallory, young American explorer, accepts a commission to find the young Hon. Laurence Morland, who has disappeared in Africa. Aboard ship, he meets Josephine Cascoden, enigmatic English girl, who calmly determined to accompany him. She boards his special car in Johannesburg, and he is forced to accept her presence.

CHAPTER X.

"I'm Afraid of Nothing!"

HE laughed outright at having been whipped at his own game. For an instant he waited—waited for her to laugh with him. She did not, and the fact she could resist, entrenching herself behind her habitual gravity after such a victory, gave him a fresh conception of her power.

"It seems we can't be friends, and perhaps you're right. Perhaps it will make things all the easier."

"Perhaps," she agreed.

"Then let's get down to brass tacks, for it won't be many minutes before we're in. We'll have several days in Lourenco Marques; it will take the best part of a week to get organized. Do you mind if we stay at the same hotel?"

"No," she answered, "why should I? It would be absurd not to."

"That's so," he said slowly, and frowned. 'If the question sounded silly it's because I'm not yet quite convinced of what's already happening. I can't believe you and I are going to trek together, live in the same camp, see each other and nobody else day after day."

"Nothing's extraordinary once it's decided," was her only comment. She returned to the matter in hand. "Why should it take you so long to get started?"

"I'll have to stock my provision boxes, half again as many of them since you are going, in carrier loads of 25 kilos to a man. Then there's the matter of horses, two instead of one, but the crucial factor is the very irregular weekly little steamer up the coast. All that's mere routine, but what about you? Do you imagine you're quite ready yourself to start?"

First Quarrel.

"Yes. I have everything I need."

"You're wrong—so wrong both ways that it's no use talking about it. You're sure to lack dozens of things you must have and have dozens you don't need and can't take along."

"Why not?"

"Because I won't let you."

"I'll take exactly what I please."

Quick anger rose in him, but he promptly controlled it. "I assure you," he said quietly, "you'll have to surrender omnipotence for a while or neither of us will go anywhere. A safari is a complicated undertaking and can have but one leader. To take along a single unnecessary load where loads sometimes stand for life or death would brand him from the start as a tenderfoot or a fool."

"I'm sorry," she said simply. "I was wrong to speak as I did."

"It's just as well, because we can come to an understanding right now. I made you a promise, and I intend to keep it. But it was decidedly limited; it didn't include, for instance, your using me for a door mat. Let's get the thing quite clear in our minds. I'm running the show. I was taught the game by an expert and if I give you an order you can be sure there's some sensible reason behind it.

"I can't promise to toss over my own judgment altogether," she said quickly.

"Can't you?" said Ballard, softly. "Let's put it in the plain language you're so fond of. If I ever tell you to do a specific thing, and you don't do it, I'll slap your face."

She stared at him, measuring his sincerity by her own. "I believe you would!" She spoke intensely, her breath coming fast. "It's the sort of thing you'd love doing—hitting out, striking at live things, killing them! But I'm not afraid of you—I'm afraid of nothing!"

Shaken by her vehemence, he stared at her. "You're mad," he said finally, "quite mad. When I slap you it will be to teach you not to play with matches or to keep you from stuffing yourself to death on jam. You're acting like a child—a babe in arms. You need a spanking this minute."

The steadiness of his voice calmed her, forced her back into composure as if he had laid physical hands on her shoulders. A startled look crept into her eyes as though they had caught a first glimpse of doubt, not of him, but of some resolve within herself. She relaxed with a sort of abandonment, like a general relinquishing an untenable position.

"I'll do exactly as you say."

Mallory Gives Orders.

He sank back with a sigh of relief. "That's fine. If you stick to it we'll surely get along. Here's the first order. When you get settled at the hotel—as soon as you've had a bath and a rest—unpack every last thing you've got. Lay the whole lot out, article by article; it will save us both a lot of time."

"Wouldn't tomorrow morning be soon enough?"

"No; it wouldn't. Because tomorrow morning is already ticketed for a tailoring and shopping expedition to replace some of the things I know I'll have to ask you to discard."

The train rumbled into the station, came to a halt, and immediately Josephine's senses—especially those of hearing, sight and smell—were in a riot. Outlandish cries in strange languages assailed her ears. Black faces, glistening with sweat, filled her eyes while her nostrils quivered to the odor of Africa, pungent yet surprisingly non-repellent. In a daze she watched Mallory pass all the baggage through the customs as if by magic. Still in a daze she walked through the monumental terminal building, out beneath its imposing pillared portico and entered a motor car.

She drew a dep quivering breath and gave Mallory a glance which made her seem as young as her years.

Josephine Changes Mood.

In another moment they reached the hotel, and when she sent for him two hours later she had resumed her cloak of maturity. Incidentally his instructions had already been carried out to the letter. Her trunk, hatbox, suitcase and even the small trinket receptacle were lined up against the wall, quite empty, while their contents were spread over the bed, across tables, chairs and on the floor. From the middle of the room he glanced at her shining baggage.

"It's a shame to take that trunk and those bags into the veldt; you won't know them when they come out. Let me buy you three lacquered tin boxes, waterproof, roomy and just as shiny as yours."

"All right," she agreed.

"That's the spirit!" he murmured, his eyes roving intently over her possessions. "Now I'm going to put what goes on the bed and stow away everything else."

Standly rigidly beside the door she watched his movements, swift as his decisions. With never a pause he passed from heap to heap, from article to article, discarding and discarding again.

In an incredibly short space of time he had finished.

Suddenly coming to her senses, she rebelled. "That's absurd. I'll have nothing to wear."

"You'll have plenty," asserted Ballard; "the only difference is they'll be things that will wear. You'll like them, too. Please trust me. If I were you, I'd put all the stuff from the bed into the trunk temporarily, and lock it."

"Why lock it?"

"To guard yourself against the temptation of cheating—of adding this and that. I'm leaving you now—going to dress for dinner."

"Do we dress?" she asked.

"We do. I'll come for you at eight." An hour later he returned and led her to the esplanade, where small groups in tropical evening wear were already gathered, most of them sipping apertifs. "Cocktail or a cinzano?" he asked.

"Neither, thanks," she answered. "But I'll have a cigarette while you drink," she added quickly as if to rob her refusal of ungraciousness.

He ordered a pernod and sipped it slowly while she smoked.

Pastel Shades In Soap Noted In Local Store

Attractive New Scented Cakes Contain Buttermilk, as Well.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

HONORABLE mention goes to soap today. Not any soap, mind you, but those luscious-looking, sweet-scented cakes shown in a downtown store.

Here's soap that boasts two reasons why it should head your shopping list. First of all, it was made especially for Washington water and can be counted on to lather freely and do a first rate job of chasing dirt. Secondly, it contains buttermilk. Buttermilk, as you probably know, counteracts the alkali content. So when you wash your hands with a cake of this soap you need have no fear that it will be sharp and biting and leave your skin rough and prone to chapping.

A dozen cakes cost $1. You may buy them in many soft pastel shades to match or blend with your bathroom color scheme.

Waffle Set Attractive.

A BARGAIN it would be impossible not to appreciate—and certainly difficult to resist—is the waffle set of a cream-colored china with delicately tinted flowers painted on it.

The set consists of a tall pitcher for the batter, a smaller one for the syrup or melted butter. Yours for $1.15.

Relish Tray for $1.

IT'S AMAZING all the nice things $1 can buy and it's equally amazing that it just takes $1 to buy the six-piece relish tray shown in a local store. This is a wide, long wooden tray with four square glass dishes—two at each end. In the center is a wooden block for your cold meats and cheeses.

The very little convenience you need for your Sunday suppers!

Odd Dish Valuable.

ANY hostess knows what good service an odd dish gives. And if that dish is attractive and practical, then its value increases by leaps and bounds.

Lots of times just such a dish can be picked up at a real bargain price. In fact, we found some yesterday. Little maple leaf shaped dishes in brown, blue and white, some of them marked with gold veins.

They are just the right size to hold candy and nuts for a bridge table. And they cost—but you guess! Wrong. Nineteen and 29 cents.

Sees Streamlined Figure Outmoded

Sculptor Doubts Boyish Figure Will Return; She Prefers Curves

Miss Hilda Scudder, Visiting Here, Says Natural Physique Lovelier, More Graceful and More in Keeping With Feminine Beauty.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

FASHIONISTS PREDICT the boyish figure for women is coming back. Trim, mannish suits and short skirts, they say, presage the inevitable return of the hipless, chestless silhouette.

Yet painters continue to glorify feminine curves and sculptors still obviously prefer well-ounded models—not as hefty as Venus de Milo, perhaps, but runners-up, at least, for Aphrodite.

Miss Hilda Scudder, widely known sculptor, yesterday explained this phenomenon as follows: "Despite style edicts, artists prefer what is most natural. In recent years feminine figures have had a chance to develop, are lovelier and more graceful than they have been since the days of ancient Greece. I don't believe the boyish figure will ever be fashionable again."

The daughter of Dr. Charles L. Scudder, of Boston, the sculptor recently came to Washington to visit friends. Her marble and bronze plaques and full-length figures attracted much favorable attention at private exhibits held here last week.

Discusses Feminine Models.

Yesterday at the home of her hostess, Mrs. William Barret Ridgely, Miss Scudder told something of the types of feminine models sculptors generally prefer and explained why so few statues and plaques portray women with boyish figures, such as fashionists predict all women will shortly be striving to attain.

"Artists almost always prefer curves to straight lines," she said. They are more graceful and more in keeping with the universal idea of feminine beauty. Wide shoulders, flat chests and narrow hips are not pretty in women because they are unnatural. Any fashion that requires wome to pattern their figures after men would be merely a fad; but I am convinced we won't have even a fad for boyish figures. Women, today, are too sensible to starve themselves into streamlines."

Yet, she is equally convinced the average woman will never again allow herself too many extra pounds. "The boyish figure fad taught women one good thing—the value of weight control to health and appearance," she said. "No matter how popular Greek curves may become, the excess poundage of the ancients will always be out of style."

Miss Scudder doubts women have ever been more beautiful than they are today. She believes they have improved greatly since they adopted the fashion for fewer clothes. "I have noticed girls on the beach at Nantucket in brief bathing suits, slacks and sandals that allow perfect freedom of movement. I believe they are more graceful and have better posture than girls a decade ago."

Modern Figure Improvement.

In this connection she also pointed out the modern feminine figure is a decided improvement over that of the Victorian age. "not only because it is now stylish to be slender, but because women use more common sense in choosing their clothes."

She believes the wasp-waist, overplushed hips and small feet that attracted a flock of suitors to the proverbial belle of the 90's would make men run the other way today. A sun-bronzed complexion and a lean, lithe figure with a few curves mean more to a modern man than a lily white cheek and an hour-glass silhouette meant to grandma's many beaux, in Miss Scudder's opinion. "Women today are giving nature a chance to fashion their figures," she said. "And the result is very satisfactory. You don't hear any sculptors longing for the 'good old days' when women pulled themselves in with steel-ribbed corsets and, in an effort to make their feet look as small as possible, generally wore shoes that were much too tight.

"And another thing," she continued. "Can you remember the hue and cry that went up when women began cutting off their crowning glory? Yet, now when there are more bobbed than long coiffures, girls are giving the sun and wind a fling at their tresses. That is another step Nature undoubtedly approves."

Child's Career Should Await Development

Parents Often Guilty of Confining Interests at Early Age.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THIS is an age of specialization, and it sometimes seems as if training for specialization begins before the child is old enough to decide what direction he wants to take.

Mary played the piano very acceptably. By the time she was 10, her career had been chosen and her education planned for the concert stage. She studied music to the exclusion of nearly all else. How could she be sure that music was really what she wanted? Furthermore, what equipment did she have for life? In musical circles she could feel at home, but for the normal contacts of life she was unfitted by the narrowness of her training.

Sam was to be an engineer, and his toys, books, outside interests were all centered on engineering from the time he was old enough to lisp. Music, art and literature were omitted from his education except as the school required them for college entrance preparation. Sam may go far in engineering, but his life always will be confined to a narrow circle of interests because of his early training.

School and home should not train for special tests or toward special jobs. They should rather make their aim the building of character, awakening interests, rousing curiosity. The child should learn broadly, trying many things, developing a wide outlook on life. It is the complete child which must be developed, not the special function. When the child, from this wide viewpoint chooses his life work, he can, with his eyes open, begin the special training he needs.

Of course, there are professions which require very early training. But even the child who is to be a musician can be kept alive to other possibilities and given a chance to expand in other directions as well as in his art.

Vivid Print Frock, in Tune With Spring, Is of Navy Blue

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Now here's a hackneyed question, although I have never happened to see it discussed in your column. I am a woman over 40, and during the past year have become acquainted with a man about 50. I have no place to entertain and he has asked me to come to his apartment. Having been reared in the horse-and-buggy eral I am doubtful about such a procedure although I should very much like to avail myself of his invitation.

• • • •

Some of my friends believe it would be perfectly all right for me to do so; others advise me against going to his apartment, and still others go so far as to say "drop the man immediately." I believe if we were younger and perhaps more irresponsible, you would say no, unequivocally, but in view of our ages and general attitude, I am wondering. Please give this question consideration in your column, if you think it worthwhile. In the meantime, I'm on the fence, whispering, —"so what?" FORTYISH.

Middle-Aged Are Capable of Keeping Own Conscience.

DEAR FORTYISH: Every person who is asked this question you put to me is going to give you a slightly different answer. For that reason, my advice to you is to let your own mature conviction of what is right and proper conduct under the circumstances dictate the course of action to take. If going to the man's apartment is likely to make you feel apologetic, defensive, uncertain and self-consciously daring, it will be best not to go. If, on the other hand, you possess that quiet authority of being, that poise and self-confidence which would enable you to spend an evening in the man's apartment as casually as you might spend it with him at a theater, restaurant, or in a home of your own, then there is no real reason why you shouldn't avail yourself of his invitation.

• • • •

A woman past 40 and a man of 50 are surely old enough to be keepers of their own consciences and masters of their actions. If you do decide to visit this man's home, don't undignify your friendly acceptance of his friendly hospitality by making copious explanations of such visits to your mutual acquaintances. In so doing, you will make a mountain of a mole hill. It has been wisely said: "Never explain. Your friends don't need it and your enemies won't believe it."

High School Girl Poses Problem of Etiquette.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I live in a small college town and go to high school. Our high school recently gave a dance in the gymnasium of a military school. The social committee was undecided about the dance and we were not sure we were going to have it until just the day before. I am well acquainted with a young man attending military school. He stays at the barracks and gets off post only twice a week.

• • • •

After the dance above mentioned he told me if he had known there was to have been a dance he would have taken me. He further told me to let him know if any such dances were planned in the future, as he should like to take me. Now, another dance is to be given, and I am wondering if it would be all right for me to let him know. If it would be all right, how shall I go about it. Thanking you in advance, I am, SCHOOL GIRL.

Technique of Extending Casual Invitation to Dance.

DEAR SCHOOL GIRL: Does the social committee send notices of its dances to men eligible to attend? If so, the most adroit method of handling this situation would be to ask the chairman of the social committee to send a notice of the forthcoming dance, over his signature, to the young man. If this isn't customary procedure, and if special exception can't be arranged in this case, convey to the young man the information he has asked for by word of mouth as casually as possible.

• • • •

Perhaps you will be seeing him before the date set for the dance. If not, I would suggest your telephoning him and asking him, simply and directly, if he expects to be free on such-and-such an evening; that your school is planning another dance on that date. Then he can say he is going to be free to take you that evening, or he can plead another engagement.

• • • •

The best way of saving your face, in case he doesn't accept such indirect invitation, is not to commit yourself in writing. In giving him ample opportunity to plead another engagement, you will be conveying the idea that the invitation is extended in an inconsequential spirit, and purely as a matter of obligatory courtesy. This will save both of you unnecessary embarrassment if he chooses not to attend. But from what you say, I believe he will accept. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of the Post Woman's Page.

Gloves, Shoes to Match In Latest Paris Styles

Paris (U.P.).—Gloves and shoes are supposed to match one another these days. One Paris bootmaker shows pumps which are cut completely in half, one side being of suede and the other of kidskin. These shoes can be obtained in almost any shade and are matched by gloves which are fashioned with backs of suede and palms of kidskin.

Winter Pains Often Result Of Infections

Cold Weather, Exposure, Wet Feet Breeder of Bacteria Crop.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

COLD weather, with its train of exposure and wet feet, always breeds a crop of infections. Perhaps bacteria unaccustomed to snow and sleet seek shelter in the warm noses and throats of human beings. At any rate inclement weather conditions outside, and hot, dry, stuffy air indoors mean a drop in physical resistance for most of us. Dormant bacteria may grow and many cases of muscular pain—erroneously called rheumatism—may result.

Those who are so unfortunate as to suffer from lumbago or sciatica are familiar with the excruciating pain that can exist in the lower back region. However, trouble at the base of the spine may not be due to either of these conditions. There may be arthritis, disease of the sacroiliac joint, or growths in the lower abdomen or the rectum. Sometimes a bad posture is responsible for severe disability.

The pain of lumbago may come suddenly and generally follows exposure or overstrain. Sometimes it will appear as the patient is stooping over; a sharp, stabbing, cramp-like pain that will cause him to cry out and prevent his resuming an erect position. The attack may last for days or even weeks.

Lumbago is also called muscular rheumatism, or fibrositis, and is similar to wry neck that may come on after a slight cold or sleeping in a draft. This "stiff-neck" situation, however, is far less painful. By most authors the cause of lumbago is laid to the existence of some local diseased area which ordinarily will not produce symptoms until the patient has dropped in resistance, permitting the absorption of pus to take place.

What can be done? Certain authorities believe that vigorous massage or quick movement of the involved muscles, regardless of the shrieks of the patient, will result in a speedy cure. Few patients, however, are willing to accept this suggestion. Our chief reliance, therefore, is upon rest, heat and adequate elimination.

Heat will dilate the blood vessels and increase the circulation and thus aid in carrying away toxins. The injection of absolute alcohol has been advocated, and the use of potassium iodine has been attended with success at the hands of many physicians. Most patients do well in bed at home. If the infection does not yield to ordinary routine treatment physical therapy may be required. This includes radiant heat, ultraviolet and gentle massage.

'Period Hair' Now the Trend In Hollywood

"Berengaria Bob" Started by Loretta Young Is Popular.

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD.— Period hair styles to accompany period dresses is the latest mode in Hollywood and other fashionable portions of the world. The Hollywood girls are cracking history books to get ideas for their coiffures.

Apparently it started with the Grecian and Renaissance styles in evening gowns, which caused the stars to wear their hair sculptured like a Greek statue or in elaborate, becurled Renaissance fashion.

The Juliet coiffure, already being widely copied, was introduced by Norma Shearer. She will wear it when she appears as Juliet in a picture.

Lili Damita appeard at a party recently wearing the "Berengaria bob," copied no doubt from that worn by Loretta Young in "The Crusades." Lili's light brown hair was cut into bangs low across her forehead, and nearly reached her shoulders.

A style of the senoritas of early California—suggested, of course, by another period film—appeals to Gladys Swarthout. She brushes her hair back, allowing it to fall in loose curls.

Hair stylists say the loose bob, so widely used now in Hollywood, can harm a woman's face if cut improperly. The length of the face should determine the length of the hair, they say.

Spring Print Offers Charm With Novelty

By Laura I. Baldt, A. M.

For many years Assistant Professor of Household Arts, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York.

IT'S ONE-PIECE! Think of it, two major parts to the pattern! After you've joined the back and the front at sides and shoulders, the dress is almost finished. In cravat print silk, it's very smart and wearable. Plain crepe silks or wool crepes are other nice mediums. Cottons, linens and pastel tub silks are lovely too for this particular model for summer with long or short sleeves. Style No. 2598 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18 years, 36, 38 and 40 inches bust. Size 16 requires 3⅝ yards of 39-inch material.

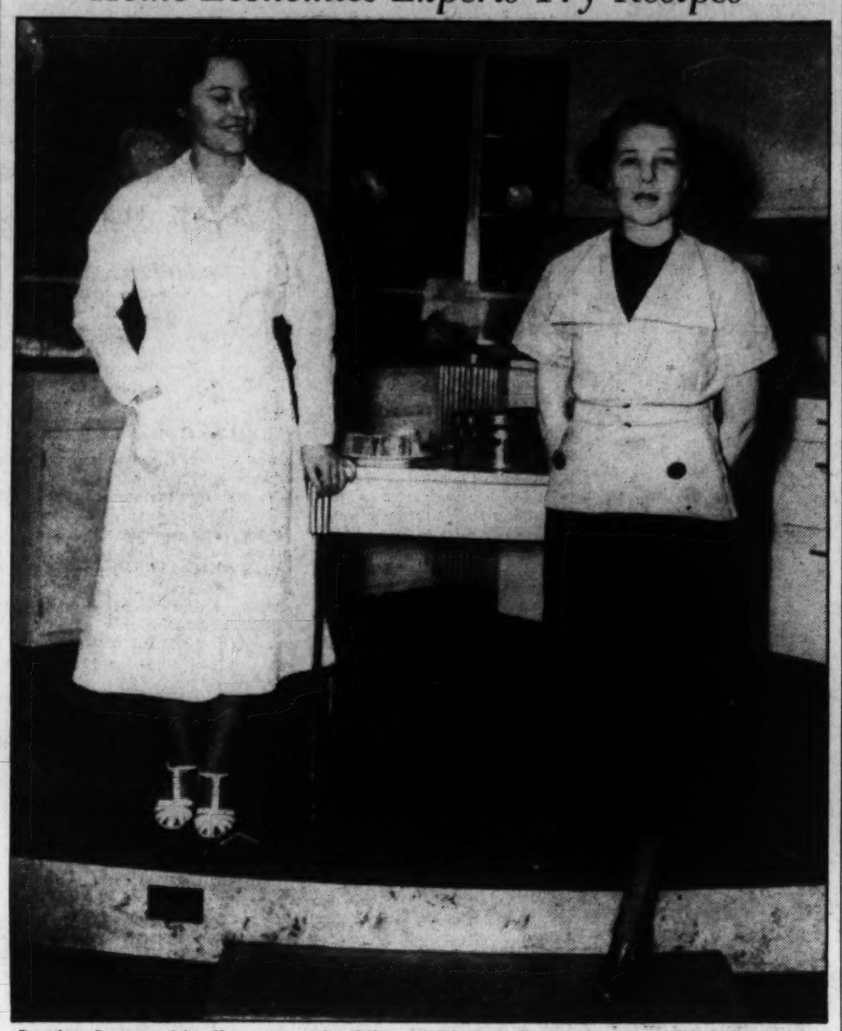
Home Economics Experts Try Recipes



Dorothea Duncan, right, Home Economics Editor of The Post, as she opened the Wednesday cooking class of the Electric Institute, at which time Miss Carolyn Chesser, left, Home Economics Director of the institute, demonstrated the four oyster recipes which won for Miss Duncan first prize in a national contest for original recipes conducted by the Oyster Institute of America.

Expert Shows How Sea Food Solves Lenten Food Problem

Oyster Recipes of Dorotheo Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Post, Selected by Carolyn Chesser at Cooking School.

IF YOU WERE present Wednesday at the cooking school presented at the Electric Institute by Miss Carolyn Chesser you will agree that the problem of what to serve for Lenten fast days is not nearly such a riddle as you had imagined.

Miss Chesser, who is a native of the Eastern Shore of Maryland, where some of the most famous oyster beds in the world are found, naturally turned to the subject of oysters as her first meat substitute suggestion for meatless menus. She chose as recipes to be demonstrated the four original oyster recipes by Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Post. These recipes, you will remember, appeared on the food page last Saturday, when it was announced that they were awarded first prize in a contest for original recipes sponsored by the Oyster Institute of North America.

Another important feature of Miss Chesser's program was a special oven dinner, suitable for a day when meat is taboo. This menu included three oven dishes, all of which can be cooked at the same temperature and at the same time in your oven. The menu and most important recipes are printed below for the benefit of The Post readers who missed this interesting cooking school.

Oven Dinner Menu

Shrimp Newburg
Steamed Spinach Cucumber Salad
Apple Cinnamon Rolls With Cream
Rye Bread Coffeee

Oven temperature 400 degrees F. Cooking time 35 minutes. The shrimp newburg, spinach and apple cinnamon rolls are all oven-cooked at the same time.

Recipes.

Shrimp Newburg.

½ cup butter
7 tablespoons flour
3 cups milk
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
2 5½-ounce cans shrimp
Buttered bread crumbs
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon salt
White pepper
Paprika
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
1 pimiento, shredded

Melt the butter, add the flour gradually, stirring constantly until thoroughly combined. Add the milk, stirring constantly, then cook until mixture has thickened. Add Worcestershire sauce, seasonings, and the shrimp. Place in a buttered casserole, sprinkle top with buttered crumbs, then bake in oven uncovered.

Apple Cinnamon Rolls.

2 cups pastry flour
4 tablespoons butter
4 teaspoons baking powder
2-3 cup milk
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups finely cut apples

Sift flour, measure, then sift again with the baking powder and salt. Cut in butter until mixture looks like cornmeal. Add milk to make a soft dough. Roll out to one-half inch thickness, spread with melted butter, cinnamon and brown sugar. Press the apples into the dough; roll up like jelly roll, seal the edges. Cut into eight slices. In the bottom of a rectangular utility dish, melt two tablespoons butter and over this spread three-fourths cup brown sugar. Place rolls, cut side down, in this mixture. Serve with cream.

Lenten Recipes.

YOUR MEATLESS Lenten dishes won't be a problem this fast season, for Dorothea Duncan has prepared a special calendar of Lenten fast day dishes for you. This bulletin, which will be sent on receipt of your name, address and a stamp, includes every type of meat substitute dish. There are recipes for cheese or egg dishes, new ways to serve a combination of vegetables, ideas for canned and dried, as well as fresh fish and shell fish. Mail your order to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post.

Obese Made Fatter.

By the Associated Press.

Iowa City, Iowa., Feb. 28.—A "vicious circle" makes fat persons fatter by increasing their appetites as their weight goes up.

This conclusion is reached in a thesis written for a master of science degree in dietetics at the University of Iowa by Miss Letta Houser, who studied a group of 40 persons ranging in weight from 124 to 322 pounds.

"I found," she said, "that obese persons have no more preference for rich foods that persons of normal weight and no greater propensity for nibbling between meals than ordinary individuals.

"But when the normal and obese groups were fed the same foods, those persons overweight always ate up to 20 per cent more, regardless of what was served, or the manner of its serving."

Parisian Hats Get 'Crazier'

Trend Toward the Extreme Continues, With Shops Seeking Novelty.

PARIS (U.P.).—Hats get a little crazier daily. We roar with laughter at the awkward hats of the gay nineties, when ladies wore shallow-crowned hats with enormous brims, loaded down with fruit, flowers, vegetables and feathers. The situation today is equally hideous and absurd, with each milliner trying to be a financial success by creating something unusual.

One prominent modiste, whose lowest price is appalling, is showing a shallow, brimless cap of navy seal fur which rises to a point and is attached perilously to the head by a silk cord which comes from the peak, ties in a bow under the chin and ends in navy fur balls. That isn't enough, so she makes a velvet hat which looks exactly like a chef's hat, small at the head opening, then flaring out in puffed fullness above the head, making the wearer look so top-heavy that one feels she might topple over.

Some half-hats are actually sold. These are insignificant bits of felt, usually pleated and trimmed with a foolish bow, which are about the size of a saucer. They are worn to the front of the head over the right eye, leaving the entire back half of the head uncovered. Naturally they can't be glued on, so they are attached by a strip of felt or ribbon over the back of the head bellboy fashion.

Hot Lemonade Popular Drink With Colds, 'Flu' Prevalent

For One Glass, Use One Lemon, Add One Cup Boiling Water and Sweeten to Taste; Honey Excellent Sweetener.

HOT LEMONADE is "tops" on the drink list for many persons at this time of the year, when colds and "flu" are prevalent.

Evere since Wu Lai wrote his "Lemon Hot Water Song" away back in the thirteenth century when the Yuan dynasty ruled in China—and maybe before that time—the virtues of hot lemonade have been sung. It is old-fashioned home treatment which continues under the approval of modern medicine.

But whereas the ancient Chinese boiled their lemon juice with sugar or honey to make what they called "She-li-pie," up-and-coming lemonade mixers of today use fresh juice, just as it is expressed from the lemons. For the vitamins which are potent elements in lemon juice lose some of their health value when cooked. Far better is it to pour boiling water on fresh lemon juice when hot lemonade time arrives.

The wise housewife chooses clean-skinned fruit of fair size, knowing this to be the greater economy in the end.

For one glass of hot lemonade, take one lemon—two is better. Add one cup of boiling water, and sweeten to taste. Honey is an excellent sweetening agent.

Many persons find an "eye-opener" of lemon juice and water an excellent conditioner and cold preventive when made an early morning habit. This lemon juice bracer may be either warm or cold.

Others prefer to add lemon to their breakfast orange juice to give it added zest.

Oyster, Wine Show Planned By Food Group

First Affair of Its Kind to Be Held in Manhattan; No Sauces Allowed.

A SCORE or more varieties of the American oyster and nearly as many appropriate wines will be shown and tasted Wednesday at the King Cole Room of the St. Regis Hotel by the Wine and Food Society of New York in the first event of its kind ever staged.

All the famous and near-famous types of oysters from Atlantic and Gulf waters will be displayed for tasting. Many types, unknown and unheralded beyond their native beaches, will round out a representative collection of Ostrea Virginica—the American oyster's more formal designation.

Only dry, still wines—the type best suited to consumption with oysters—will be supplied by importers, and at least 15 brands will be served. Among the varieties are Chablis, Moselle, Rhine, Alsatian, White Bordeaux and Hungarian Tokay.

Wedges of lemon and brown bread and butter will complete the service of the tasting. The members of the society believe that the oyster's flavor is enhanced by a dash of lemon juice instead of cocktail sauce or other condiments, which often diminish or obliterate the taste.

First Food Formally Tasted.

The oyster is the first food ever accorded a formal tasting. Beverage tasting is resorted to frequently by gourmets interested in distinguishing flavors of wines and by importers seeking the finest flavored tea or coffee.

The showing and tasting of the American oyster, however, is not a competition. Each taster indulges in as many varieties as his appetite will sanction, formulates his own opinion, but the society cannot proclaim any type the peer of all others.

A list of the towns supplying the oysters reads like a gazette of the oyster industry, second largest of the fishery industries. The industry employs about 60,000 men during the oyster season, and the value of its yields a year ago amounted to more than $6,000,000.

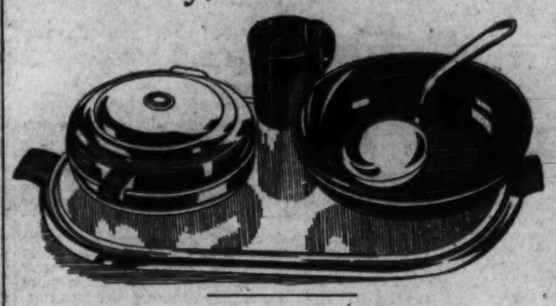
Delicacy Since Roman Days.

Largest supplies for the tasting will come from Long Island and Chesapeake Bay. Other sources include Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware, Virginia, North Carolina, Maryland and Florida.

Crosby Gaige, theatrical producer and chairman of the society committee in charge of dinners and tasting, said the oyster has been a prized delicacy for gourmets at least since Roman times and that the society was only giving the oyster its due place in the scale of epicurean delights.

Howard W. Beach, of New Haven, Conn., president of the Oyster Growers and Dealers Association which directs the Oyster Institute of North America, has supervised the collection of the types of oysters. The organizations jointly offered a full supply of bivalves.

Post Recipe Contest Begins Today, With Lots of Prizes



Six Awards to Be Made Each Week, and Four Grand Ones at the Close; Merely Send in Your Favorite Recipe on the Subject for the Week.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THERE IS FUN ahead for Post food page readers, for today a new contest for favorite recipes begins. There will be prizes, too, six of them every week until Easter, and then four lucky women will be awarded the four prizes pictured today.

The contest follows this plan: Each week there will be a new contest subject, and at the end of each week six women will be awarded $1 each for their recipes. At the end of the contest, there will be a final judging of all weekly prize-winning recipes to determine the winners of the final awards. This means that every woman has six opportunities in which to become eligible for one of the final awards. So begin right away by entering the first contest.

The subject next week is meat substance dishes. This subject is a timely one, for never are meat substitute dishes so important as during the Lenten season.

The first final prize, which is pictured above, will delight the heart of any hostess. It is a complete waffle set, non-tarnishing, chromium iron, matching tray with smart black handles, a black sirup pitcher and deep batter bowl and ladle each effective with bright chromium trim.

Second grand prize is an electric iron, and to those in the know there has never been such an iron. It is streamlined, of course, to fit into the modern kitchen. But it has other advantages, heretofore unknown in an electric iron. It is scorchproof, or to explain it more fully, it has a switch which indicates the perfect heat for every type of fabric whether wool, cotton, linen, silk or rayon.

An electrically heated casserole is the third prize. This piece of equipment is indispensable to the modern hostess, for it not only serves as an excellent utility pan for the kitchen, but can be used in place of a chafing dish for special buffet parties. It can be used for cooking all manner of casserole dishes that would ordinarily be baked in the oven, or it can be put into service to keep foods warm that have been cooked in advance for special occasions—buffet party seafood newburgs, for example, to mention only one.

Last but not least among the grand prizes is an electric clock. The one offered as fourth prize is appropriate for any kitchen. It is designed for beauty as well as service. The lucky winner of this clock can put behind her forever that nightly trip to the kitchen to wind the clock.

This contest is open to everyone except Post employes. There are no difficult entry rules to follow. Merely send your favorite recipe for a meat substitute dish to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. Be sure that your recipe reaches this office not later than next Saturday morning. Results from the first contest will be published on the food page the following Wednesday. At the close of each weekly contest, which is on Saturday, the new contest subject for the following week will be announced.

Lamp Styles Swing To Touches of Color

News from Paris states that lamps are increasingly prominent as a decorative feature and a great number of novelties have been displayed by interior decorators and designers. While the vogue of plain white lamps with white taffeta shades still continues there is a trend toward such colorful touches as bright red tassels or fringe in rayon or dull Albene cordeliere. Beads in bright colored plastic material are sometimes alternated with transparent crystal ones to form a contrast. Old-fashioned lamp shades in printed taffeta, and especially in warp taffeta, are coming back into fashion and are often seen with modernistic designs. Shades of very rough fabrics in flax or linen with a very loose weave are also much in evidence. They are often seen in natural tones decorated with heavy wooden beads inspired by antique rosaries.

Hearty Meals Call for These Fruit Desserts

DESSERTS to follow a hearty meal should be refreshing, simple, and leave one with a feeling of plenty, but not repletion. The easier they are to prepare the greater the appeal to the housewife, and rightly so.

Nothing is any better than well-chilled fruit sauce, such as loganberries, red raspberries, blackberries or strawberries, all of which come prepared in tin cans. When the sauce is served plain it shows off to better advantage if served in glass dishes, preferably those with stems, as the light shines through allowing the color to display itself. Crisp cookies or sponge cake are acceptable when served with any of these fruits.

To make the fruit dessert a little more elaborate, but still retaining the simplicity and refreshing quality desired, the fruit sauce may be served over an individual mold of baked custard, rennet powder desert or Bavarian cream.

Still another way to serve the berries is a la island. This method is especially suited for a family meal where the mother serves the dessert from the table. Make a meringue with egg whites and sugar just as for any pie, that is, allow two tablespoons of sugar to one egg white and beat until stiff. A bit of vanilla or a few drops of lemon juice may be added to the meringue. Drop by teaspoonsfuls onto a baking sheet rinsed with cold water, and bake until a delicate brown in a moderately slow oven (about 325 degrees F.). Meantime pour the contents of the chosen fruit into a pretty bowl. Arrange the meringues over the top, allowing them to float in the sauce.

"WE DELIVER"

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY ARE an informal young pair starting housekeeping with a little of this and a little of that, which various relations have contributed. The problem is to use these things and yet create the kind of home they want. There are oyster white walls in the living room, three overstuffed pieces of furniture, a taupe rug, a walnut grand piano and a walnut radio. They will add new end tables, lamps and accessories and would like to introduce some maple furniture into the room. Is this advisable, they ask, considering the fact that the two larger pieces of furniture are walnut? And how can they get the early American effect that they want in wall treatment? They'd like to use two hooked rugs over the taupe rug if that would be all right. What covers for the overstuffed set? What draperies and curtains?

We think it would be quite all right to combine the walnut things with maple. And they could use hooked rugs with their taupe rug very nicely. They might have the sofa recovered or slip covered in blue, then have one chair in yellow and the other in red sprigged chintz with draperies of the same chintz over crisp white curtains. For the walls we'd have old samplers, early maps, quaint old prints and silhouettes. Flower and bird prints would also be appropriate.

Maharanee Buys Clothes by Mail

Paris (U.P.).—One of the best dressed women in the world buys her clothes through mail orders. The explanation of her smartness is that her clothes come from Schiaparelli's Paris house. The chic lady is the Maharanee Holkar of Indore, the attractive young wife of the ruler of Indore. Her husband is the son of Sir Tukojirao Holkar, the Maharajah who married the former Nancy Miller, of Seattle, after he had been deposed.

The Maharanee of Indore keeps in touch with Schiaparelli's Paris house and each time a new collection is shown, she is sent colored sketches of the type clothes she wears. She makes her choice from the sketches and the swatches of material and the Paris couturiere makes up the clothes to her measurements.

TO MILLIONS WHO SHOULD USE BRAN

Tests Show ALL-BRAN Corrects Constipation* Gently and Naturally

Since its introduction, some fifteen years ago, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has been used with beneficial results by millions of people.

Realizing the important relationship between proper diet and health, the Kellogg Company has aided for some years research in leading university laboratories. These tests show that the continued use of bran is thoroughly satisfactory.

ALL-BRAN supplies soft "bulk" which absorbs water, and gently cleanses the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and iron. Use as a cereal with milk or cream, or cook in delicious recipes.

This tempting cereal may be enjoyed by every normal person. Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Consult your doctor if you do not gain relief this way.

Help your family keep well. Serve Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

*Constipation due to insufficient "bulk."

Chiefs Score Edict on Pay Influences

Rogers, King Attack Warning by D. J. Official.

Civil Service Broup Supports Order by Lawrence.

A warning from a bureau head in the Justice Department against seeking Congressional influence to obtain promotions or pay raises yesterday created a mild storm of disapproval on Capitol Hill but was found to be in strict accord with a regulation of the Civil Service Commission.

Joseph Lawrence, administrator of the taxes and penalties unit, in a memorandum to employes, said members of Congress should not be expected to "godfather an appointee for the rest of his life in Government service," but he conceded it would be all right for an employe to associate with his congressional sponsor in "a social or political" way.

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, criticized the order as did other members. The Civil Service Commission pointed out, however, that a regulation promulgated by the President following the passage of the civil service act prohibits "improper recommendations."

Commission Rule.

The commission rule, Section 3 of Rule 11, states that no recommendation for promotion of a classified employe shall be considered by the commission unless made by the immediate superior of the employe.

Any recommendation from another source, the rule adds, if made with the knowledge and consent of the employe, shall bar the worker from promotion. A repetition of the offense, it continues, will be considered sufficient cause for dismissal.

There is pending on the Senate calendar, however, a bill sponsored by Senator Black (Democrat), of Alabama, to make this rule more effective by specific law.

The Black bill, reported favorably by the Senate Civil Service Committee, would require every employe, upon receiving a promotion, to file a sworn statement that he has "not solicited, directly or indirectly, from any Senator, member of Congress, political committee, or any other political organization, any political influence to obtain such promotion."

When he offered the bill, Senator Black complained that Government employes were making the lives of members of Congress miserable by their solicitations.

Black's measure carries a penalty of six months suspension for the first conviction of filing a false statement. Dismissal is provided for second offense.

Rogers Statement.

Mrs. Rogers said she saw no reason why Government employes should not be permitted to call upon their Congressional sponsors when the Areasury did not hesitate to ask employes to buy $50 Jackson day dinner tickets.

Senator King, while explaining that he opposed the bringing of any pressure on members of Congress, said he saw no objection to employes being allowed to carry complaints of injustices to them.

Lawrence, a former member of the Conecticut House of Representatives and a friend of the President, said last night:

"Please understand, I had no thought of being the least arbitrary or dictatorial in issuing this circular leter. I abhor injustice as such as any man in the Government, and I as constantly on guard to detect it. My friends on the Hill have recognized this many times. I am no reformer, either. If you had tagged me as one when you first discovered this letter, you erred."

Price Too High.

"I think I am realist enough to know, too, that we cannot and should not remove politics from Government. Jeopardize the party system in this country and you jeopardize the liberties of the people, indeed. The old world today furnishes many examples of this. It is too high a price to pay for dubious efficiency. Real efficiency in Government, yes, and idealism, too, has proved possible of attainment under the party system, even granting room for improvement."

Neutrality Law Cannot Cure Evils of War, Says Sen. Thomas

The evil of war cannot be cured by an American neutrality law, Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, said last night, and he cited Washington's traffic violators on Capitol Hill—to emphasize his point.

Senator Thomas, who played an important part in drafting the neutrality act of February 18, spoke before a distinguished audience of diplomats, Government officials and scholars at a meeting of the Academy of World Economics in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Last year when a war was threatened in Europe, Senator Thomas said, Americans pounced on the idea of neutrality as one that would keep them out of conflict. They had no desire to understand neutrality, its history and its purposes in the world of law and international relations. Senator Thomas said.

Single-Handed Cure.

The Utah statesman, along with the speaker who preceded him, Dr. Ernest Minor Patterson, president of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, emphasized that neutrality might not be enough.

"We attempted to cure single-handedly the evil of war without realizing that war is a matter of universal concern and can never be anything else in our modern world," he said.

"The zeal of some of us to cure the war evil by mere law has about as much reason behind it as the present momentary zeal of one of our great newspapers to cure the parking and traffic evils of the District of Columbia by publicizing the careless parking of a few members of Congress who do not think they can be arrested.

"Probably a study of Washington's traffic and parking problems should start with a study of streets, and their purposes, and after that, work out specific problems. The cure for traffic ills will be found only after laws are built upon the broad fundamentals growing out of proper customary use, not on a law aimed at the punishment of a flagrant but, comparatively speaking, insignificant abuse.

Sea Situation.

"If a street belongs to everybody, just how much of it can a particular person take for his own? The answer depends upon the place and the number of other people who wish to use that street.

"Neutrality is a complex subject. One phase of it has to do with the use of the sea and the theory in connection with its use. Now if the sea belongs to nobody how much of it may a nation call its own. We may renounce our claim to any use, but that will not cause all other users of the sea to renounce their claims. The problem is larger than a domestic one.

"We cannot cure traffic problems by putting up signs with nobody paying any attention to them. Our notice posted that we will keep off the sea would be a sign which others might not even read. We can fall off a cliff, but it takes some planning and some thoughtfulness to climb back. Nations can rush into war without thought, but peace can be built upon a plan of concerted action and upon understanding."

Failure Cited.

Neutrality may keep this country out of war, Senator Thomas said, but he pointed out that it has not done so in the past. The recent changes in the American neutrality law, he said, represented an improvement, and if lived up to might remove certain dangers that might lead the country into war.

"We must first find some substitute for war. That's the only answer. To use a psychological term, war has become a national habit, and nations have been indulging in that habit for 6,000 years.

He warned that a too severe use of economic sanctions against a belligerent will defeat the purpose of those sanctions, and he suggested that other countries might find a lesson in self-restraint in the governmental setup in the United States.

Ideal Setup.

"We did not," he said, "provide in our Constitution against the possibility of our Federal Government's taking action against a State, yet we guaranteed a republican form of government to each of the States. We set up an ideal which probably could not be enforced without destroying the Union."

Fifty-odd nations of the League of Nations, he pointed out, are applying economic pressure to Italy, but in so doing a number of them are trying to gain an advantage.

Dr. Patterson, whose topic, like that of Senator Thomas, was "Economics of Neutrality," predicted that the American approach to the problem of war would not be effective, although he conceded that the agitation for neutrality was a gain.

"Unless major wars can be prevented," he said, "we shall become involved in them. Unless the more fundamental causes can be determined and removed, there is little or no hope that we can keep out. If a war occurs between leading powers we shall in all probability participate on one side or the othre—as an ally or as an associte."

Dr. James B. Scott, secretary of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, presided.

Delinquent Tax Law Revision Planned Here

Commissioners May Name Board to Study and Suggest Changes.

Thorough overhauling of the District delinquent tax laws was decided on by the District Commissioners yesterday.

A committee of three District officials probably will be charged with the task and directed to work with representatives of the Board of Trade, the Real Estate Board and the Washington Taxpayers Association, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen announced.

The group would be charged with examining present laws dealing with delinquent taxes, delinquent tax sales and redemption of tax-sold property. It also would be charged with studying the administration of these laws.

Action of the Commissioners has been under consideration for some time, but was brought to a head by criticism of the present system on the floor of the House by Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, member of the House District Committee.

The committee would be directed to make whatever recommendations it might deem remedial after studying the workings of the present law and administration machinery. Delinquent tax laws of other cities and States would be studied and aid of experts whose services could be obtained from the Federal service or some other source gratis probably would be asked.

"I do not know that the District has the best law which can be devised," Commissioner Hazen said. "Taxes are a burden on most everyone. None the less they seem to be necessary to run the Government. Perhaps the present law, which has been changed from time to time by Congress is the best. It seems evident that the District simply can't sit idly by and let those who are willing to pay do so and not take some action to persuade those who are not so willing. Hardships undoubtedly are worked on some by the law and we should do everything we reasonably can, within the limits of sound government, to ease whatever hardships there may be. A study and review of the whole situation at this time would be worth while."

N.E.A. Appoints Ballou, Mrs. Phillips to Group

Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou and Mrs. C. Estelle Phillips, president of the High School Teachers Association of the District, have been appointed consultants to the educational policies commission of the National Education Association, it was announced yesterday.

The commission was established in December, 1935, for a five-year term to develop long-range planning for the improvement of American schools.

Bill to Repeal Anti-Red Rider Due in Senate

Wagner to Introduce Plan Next Week Similar to Sisson Measure.

The battle to repeal the "anti-red" rider that forbids the mention of communism in local schools will be spread to the Senate next week with the introduction of a bill similar to that proposed by Representative Fred J. Sisson, of New York.

The bill is expected to be introduced by Senator Robert Wagner, of New York, who is sympathetic with the aim of the measure. Senators Burton K. Wheeler, Hugo L. Black, Bennett Champ Clark and Edward L. Costigan are reported ready to take the Senate floor in support of the bill.

Meanwhile, with the number of requests of speakers desiring to testify before the sub-committee on education that is holding the hearing on the Sisson bill swelling daily, Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, obtained the unanimous consent of the House yesterday to permit an all-day hearing Monday.

This all-day session, it is hoped, will permit the sub-committee to draft its report in time for the next full meeting of the committee, so that the bill can be placed on the House calendar for the next District day, March 9.

Resolutions urging the repeal of the rider were received by the Board of Education yesterday from the Citizens Association of Chevy Chase, the Professional Directors of Religious Education of the District and the Parent-Teacher Association of the Bancroft School.

Newly Discovered Mineral May Aid in Steel Production

Discovery of a hitherto unknown mineral with a 44 per cent vanadium content was announced yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution.

The mineral, bright, canary-yellow in color and powdery in form, was unearthed in the sandstone cracks along the north wall of the Gypsum Valley in Colorado by Edward P. Henderson, mineralogist of the United States National Museum. It has been named steigerite in honor of Dr. George Steiger, formerly chief chemist of the United States Geological Survey.

A combination of vanadium, aluminum oxides and water, the new mineral may prove of considerable commercial value in iron and steel manufacture if it can be found in sufficient quantities, it was pointed out.

Discovery of two other new minerals by William F. Foshag, also of the National Museum staff, was also announced. One mineral, a variety of ganophyllite, is a mixture of silicon, aluminum, iron, calcium, magnesium abd other oxides. The second mineral, known as "zincian amphibole" is an amphibole mineral containing an unusual amount of zinc and manganese.

Both were found near Franklin Furnace, N. J.

The discovery of new minerals is a continuous process, Dr. Foshag explained, from 10 to 25 new minerals being unearthed throughout the world each year. Whether this meant that new minerals were being formed or that ancient minerals were being brought to light was uncertain, he said, as there is no way of telling the age of minerals.

Some minerals form in only a few minutes, others require a geological age, depending upon the physical conditions and the chemical elements involved. All minerals are a mixture of some of the 90 known chemical elements.

At present, Dr. Foshag estimated, there are about 1,500 known minerals throughout the world. Most of these have been discovered and classified since 1800.

Walsh Says Communism Study Needed

Knowledge Necessary to Fight It, University Cleric Declares.

Ex-Papal Envoy Avoids Mention of 'Red Rider' in District Bill.

A knowledge of communism is necessary, if it is to be intelligently combated in the United States, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University, and student of Russian history, said last night in the third of a series of lectures.

Father Walsh, who was the papal envoy in Russia in 1922, made no direct reference to the "red rider" on the District appropriation bill, which in effect prohibits teachers in local public schools from mentioning communism.

His audience, however, obviously had that in mind as Father Walsh, in a phillipic against Soviet Russia, said:

"For 15 years, at home and abroad, in classroom, in lecture hall, in group conferences, and by written word, I have sought to make communism better understood, by laying bare its origin, its principles, its claims to universal domination and the importance of its challenge to Christianity and democracy.

"In my opinion, it is one of the inescapable and major problems in modern civilization. He is a dilettante in the history of social upheavals, and an amateur in the knowledge of revolutionary psychology, who would brush it aside as something alien to the American tradition and unthinkable in the United States.

"Creeping Fever."

"I know of no automatic immunity to such a subtle, persistent and creeping fever. The best prophylaxis is knowledge of the disease, vigilance against carriers of the infection, and vigorous strengthening of the powers or resistance in our own economic and social system."

Father Walsh, examining the creed of communism, began with the social economics of Karl Marx. He said:

"His sociology—which lies at the heart of communistic sociology, and furnishes the mainspring of the Communist program everywhere—was dominated by one obsession, one master conviction, that overshadowed and absorbed every other reality of life, and reduced civilization to simply a mad scramble for commodities.

"Amply fortified by the abuses of the factory system in nineteenth century England and elsewhere (against which he drew the most trenchant indictment on record), enraged and embittered by the callousness of employers, during the period of increased productivity that accompanied an industrial revolution, that had been effected by machinery and the harnessing of power, he would correct specific abuses by universal demolition of all existing institutions.

"He would smash the state, the church, the economic framework of society, social solidarity, the Christian virtues, a goodly percentage of human liberties, democratic concepts of government, and all belief in Divinity. He would not cure the patient of an acknowledged corporeal malady; he would slay the soul of mankind, and create another in his own image and likeness."

In Soviet Russia.

"And what that image and likeness is you have before you today in Soviet Russia.

Absolute and brutal dictatorship by a small entrenched minority.

A muzzled and pitifully subservient press.

Exile and death, even in the nineteenth year after the November revolution, for all who dare to raise their voice in defense of fundamental liberties.

More prisoners to Siberia in five years than the worst of the Tsars banished in a century—a computation based on Soviet statistics, which I publicly invite their apologists to disprove.

Six million helpless peasants slaughtered in the government-controlled and maneuvered famine of 1933, in the Ukraine.

A continuing and obscene campaign against religion.

A revival of plans for a world revolution, published from Moscow last August, with the approval and co-operation of Stalin, and followed by the dispatch of trained revolutionaries to the Pacific Coast, for the purpose of fomenting strikes and class warfare in the United States, under the direction of an alien revolutionary from Australie.

"As the nature of fire is to burn, of water to moisten, and pitch to contaminate, so the inherent, the sworn and unchanged purpose of communism consists in the triple activity of collectivizing the human race, despiritualizing the human soul and reducing the individual to the drab uniformity of poor, perishable dynamos, geared and regimented to the service of a totalitarian state, arrogating to itself the attributes and cruelty of a pagan god."

Dean of Washington Cathedral to Resign

Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl Held His Office for 20 Years.

DEAN BRATENAHL.

The Very Rev. G. C. F. Bratenahl, dean of Washington Cathedral for 20 years, will retire on May 1, it was announced yesterday at the chapter of the cathedral by its secretary, Canon Anson Phelps Stokes.

It was learned that Dean Bratenahl was recently elected a "life trustee" of the cathedral, an honor held only by one living person, Dr. William C. Rives, in addition to the Bishop of Washington. This was voted to Dr. Bratenahl in view of his exceptionally distinguished service.

Dean Bratenahl has been tendered the honorary office of dean emeritus. The chapter voted to continue him as chairman of the building committee and as iconographer of the cathedral.

The chapter's statement declared:

"The chapter has passed a special vote that because of Dean Bratenahl's record of service as uniquely valuable as it has been diligent, faithful and long-continued, his retirement allowance shall remain throughout his life equal to his total present salary."

Dean Bratenahl has been connected with the cathedral since 1898, serving with the first Bishop of Washington, the late Right Rev. Henry Yates Satterlee, and then continuing with the second bishop, the Right Rev. Alfred Harding, in whose regime he was dean of Washington.

He is regarded as one of the leading authorities on iconography and cathedral architecture and building and has written and spoken extensively on these subjects.

Dean Bratenahl was rector of St. Albans Parish from 1898 to 1912. Before becoming dean of Washington he was secretary of the Province of Washington from 1914-1915. On Ascension Day 1916 he was installed as dean of Washington at ceremony held in the Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral.

Dean Bratenahl was born in Cleveland, Ohio, on May 4, 1862, the son of the late Charles George Bratenahl and Mary Grant Fitch Bratenahl. In 1883 he was graduated from Williams College and engaged in business life in New York and Europe until 1896, when he was ordained a deacon in the Episcopal Church, later becoming priest in 1898.

He has twice married, his present wife having been Mrs. Florence Brown Finn, of Cleveland, Ohio, before their marriage on June 16, 1915. Dean and Mrs. Bratenahl have two sons, Charles Bratenahl and Alexander Brown Bratenahl, both students at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H.

The chapter's statement concluded with the following paragraph: "The chapter hopes that at the time of the dean's retirement, or soon thereafter, some younger man will assume the duties of dean, to press vigorously the spiritual work of the cathedral, and further to relieve the bishop of many responsibilities in connection with cathedral matters, and to give Mr. Bratenahl more time for his invaluable work in planning the cathedral's iconography and architectural development."

Doctors to Tell Clinic of Work WithHormones

G. W. U. Physicians to Relate Result of Experiments in Producing Life.

How the result of medical research now enables women to become mothers although previously they could not bear children will be described today at the fourth annual postgraduate clinic of the George Washington School of Medicine.

Three physicians—J. Kotz, Elizabeth Parker and Harry Douglas—members of the university's new endocrine clinic, will tell how they brought motherhood to certain types of barren women by injecting various hormones—chemicals secreted by various glands to stimulate the body.

The three experimenters studied their various patients to determine what hormones were defective and then supplied the missing chemicals. As a result, the normal balance was restored and childbearing became possible for women previously unable to experience motherhood.

Dr. William J. Mallory, professor of medicine, will preside at the one-day meeting.

The speakers at the morning session will include Dr. Frederick A. Reuter, Dr. J. Lawn Thompson, Dr. Paul F. Dickens, Dr. Charles S. White, Dr. Howard F. Kane, Dr. Walter Freeman, Dr. Hyman D. Shapiro, Dr. Jacob Kotz, Dr. Daniel L. Borden, Dr. Harry H. Donnally and Dr. Radford Brown.

Following the morning session, there will be a luncheon.

The afternoon demonstrations will be given in the laboratories of the School of Medicine by Dr. George B. Jenkins, Dr. Roger M. Choisser, Dr. Harry F. Dowling, Dr. Leland W. Parr, Dr. Edward B. Vedder, Dr. Vincent DuVigneaud, Dr. George B. Roth, Dr. Errett C. Albritton and Dr. Walter K. Meyers.

The program of the clinic this year is dedicated to Dr. Sterling Ruffin, nationally known physician and professor of medicine emeritus.

9-Man Board May Choose Airport Site

Conferees Adopt Plan; Six Members Would Be Legislators.

Past Proposals of House and Senate Ignored to End Deadlock.

By James D. Secrest.

A nine-man commission, including six members of Congress, probably will be assigned the task of selecting a site for a District-Federal airport before next January as the result of an agreement reached yesterday by Senate and House conferees, breaking a seven months' deadlock.

Discarding past proposals of both the House and Senate, the conferees unanimously agreed to the compromise plan and expect to call it up in their respective chambers early next week.

The commission will comprise three members of the House to be appointed by the Speaker, three members of the Senate to be named by the Vice President and three persons to be selected by the President.

An authorization of $100,000 is carried in the new measure, as yet undrafted, of which $10,000 will be expended for technical services and $90,000 may be used to obtain an option on any site the commission decides to recommend to Congress.

Although prolonged hearings and inquiries have been made during the last decade, one of the most exhaustive being conducted by a House sub-committee last year, further public hearings will be held by the commission, Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, predicted.

Congressmen in Group.

Last night it appeared that the six members of Congress to be named on the commission will be:

Senator King and Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, and Austin (Republican), of Vermont.

Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, and Representatives Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois.

Senator King said he would recommend the appointments of Tydings and Austin and would himself serve if the District Committee insists. He added, however, that he is very busy with other matters, including District legislation.

Mrs. Norton said she would make no recommendations to the Speaker, but expected that Nichols and Dirksen will be chosen, as they have been the most active House conferees on the bill.

After the congressional members are appointed, according to Senator King, they will call upon President Roosevelt and confer with him regarding the appointments of the other three members.

"It was the view of the conferees," he said, "that one of the three should be either a District Commissioner or an outstanding citizen."

The other two, he added, should be outstanding persons who have taken no sides in past battles between advocates of Washington Airport and Gravelly Point.

Airport in Year Seen.

Consequently, the President is not expected to name representatives of any of the governmental agencies which previously have gone on record as indorsing Washington Airport. These include the War Department, the Commerce Department and the Postoffice Department.

The former House bill provided for the representation of these agencies on the commission, while the Senate measure left the appointments entirely up to the President.

While Senate and House conferees were engaged in drafting new airport legislation, operations at Washington Airport were transferred to Bolling Field temporarily because the former was knee-deep in mire caused by the overflow from the Potomac River.

Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University, will speak at midweek Lenten services Wednesday night in Reformation Lutheran Church.

The service will be the second of the special meetings at the church in which prominent ministers from churches throughout Washington and other clergymen will speak.

At the 11 a. m. service tomorrow Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor, will preach on "Jesus and the Meaning of Life." At the 8 p. m. service his subject will be "Jesus and Self-Control." Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen and Harry Dunlap will speak at the 5 p. m. meeting of the Washington District Luther League.

Christ Lutheran Church. The Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "Faith That Holds Out in the Day of Trial and in the Hour of Temptation."

Grace Lutheran Church. The Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor. Sunday's services will be centered on the Lenten theme, and the significance of the pre-Easter period for modern Christians. At the 11 a. m. service the pastor will preach on "Christianity Without the Cross—Is It Christianity?"

The Rev. Adrian Pfeiffer, pastor of Takoma Lutheran Church, will preach at the Wednesday night Lenten service.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church. The Rev. Henry W. Snyder, D. D., pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "On Through the Cynic's Scorning." At the evening service his subject will be "Dreams of Brotherhood."

Luther Place Memorial Church. The Rev. Carl C. Rasmussen, D. D., will preach tomorrow morning on "I Believe in Jesus Christ—Judge." This is the fifth sermon on "The Age-Long Faith of the Church."

Paul Meyer will lead the Christian Endeavor Society on "What Should I Do on Sundays?" The meeting is at 7 p. m.

The Christian Endeavor Union of Washington will meet at 8 p. m. Monday in the church for a program of music, numbers being given by members of the several Christian Endeavor societies.

St. Mark's Lutheran Church. The Rev. J. Luther Frantz, pastor, will preach on "Tempted and Tried" tomorrow morning. "Christ's Beautitudes" will be the subject of Lenten services each Wednesday night until Easter.

Synagogue Parley Here March 13-17

The United Synagogue of America and the Women's League of the United Synagogue have invited representatives from every section of the country for a convention here, March 13 to 17. More than 1,000 delegates are expected, Morris Stein, chairman of the local arrangements committee, announced yesterday.

Mrs. George Levy has been appointed chairman of the women's organization and has formed committees to plan a full program of events for the women's league.

A feature of the convention will be a symposium on "How Can the Ethical Teachings of Religion Be Made Effective in Everyday Life?" Several nationally known leaders will take part in discussions.

Two Visiting Pastors At Memorial Church

In the absence of the Rev. Simpson B. Daugherty, pastor, the pulpit of Memorial United Brethren Church will be occupied tomorrow morning by the Rev. Ward Smith, and in the evening by the Rev. A. A. Keiser.

Mr. Smith will preach on "The True God," and Mr. Keiser on "Next Things."

Virginia Sets Pace in Ring Tourney, Advancing Seven Battlers

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., February 28.

Mr. Gus H. Fan,
General Delivery,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Gus:

You'll be seeing very little this season of Red Kress, the fellow who was something of a story-book hero while the Nats were hitting the skids in the 1935 pennant race.

You remember Red, Gus. He's the guy who was sadly packing his bags for the hard and galling trip back to the minors that hot August afternoon last summer, wondering how he was going to explain it all to the wife and kiddy, when he got that phone message to come back to the ball park because Buddy Myer had been kicked out of the first game of the double-header and the Nats were shy on infielders.

POVICH.

You remember, Gus, how Red hopped into a cab, hustled into a uniform in time for the second game, his release to Chattanooga canceled, and then made four straight hits against the Cleveland pitching.

That nick-of-time reprieve from the minors lighted some kind of a new spark in Kress, Gus, you remember. I don't have to remind you how they couldn't get him out of the line-up after that; how he made at least one safe hit in the next 25 games and how he pulled his batting average up from .168 to .350 at one point in September.

Well, Gus, that was last year. This spring, Kress is foredoomed either to a place on the Nats' bench or a release to the minors. They didn't have any trouble getting waivers on him last year, you remember, Gus, and he's a year older now, and no faster.

He's distinctly in the rear of the eight ball again, because Bucky Harris has other plans for the shortstop position.

They've already given the job to Cecil Travis. He figures to out-hit Kress and probably outfield him. Red could never go to his left to any great extent, and on the bases he was slightly slower than Cliff Bolton on snowshoes. And the fact that the Washington bosses are nutty on the subject of youth is not helping Kress' prospects.

There's only one chance that Kress will stay with the club, Gus, and that is in a distinct utility role. He's the only man on the squad outside of Joe Kuhel who knows his way around first base, and he may be retained on that account.

You're gonna get a pleasant surprise Gus, when you see young Buddy Lewis in action around third base when the Nats return to Washington. I know that first impressions of Lewis last fall were anything but favorable. You remember how he bobbled those balls around third base and looked like anything but a hitter when they put a bat in his hands.

Well, the fact is, Gus, that young Lewis was a badly worn young fellow when you saw him in action. He had just put in a long, 150-game season with Chattanooga, in the Southern Association, and Southern league ball will wear down the best of 'em. Lewis was only 18 then, a kid playing his first full season in organized ball, and he was in no condition to impress anybody in a big-league tryout.

Bucky Harris is making allowances for that, Gus. Down here, Lewis doesn't seem like the same skinny, weak-hitting, uncertain-fielding kid that you saw. He's filled out big, he's fresh, and he's making those ground balls dance into his glove. He's taking a solid poke at the ball and he's meeting it. He's gonna be the Nats' regular third baseman or I'm as wet as the Lusitania.

Yrs. in sport,
SLP.

Nats' Rookie Pitchers Not Promising

Manager Harris Willing to Be Surprised by Young Hurlers.

Lanahan, Coppola Not Considered Novices; Rain Halts Drill.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 28.—Manager Bucky Harris broke down and confessed today that the development of any of his younger crop of rookie pitchers into a regular 1936 performer will come as a great surprise to him.

Harris is willing to be surprised, what with the Nats woefully shorthanded on the mound, but at this writing is unable to look for help in the direction of the raft of lads who are in training with the club for the first time.

If the Nats are to return North with added pitching strength as a result of the training campaign here, Harris believes it will be supplied by such oldsters as Monte Weaver and Pete Appleton, who are attempting comebacks from the International League.

Lanahan Exception.

Harris excludes two others in his estimates of his rookie pitching talent—Henry Coppola and Dick Lanahan. This pair, who were with the club for the first time last season, he places in a special category as distinguished from the dozen young fellows who are making their first big league bid.

Barring startling developments in spring training games, such as Joe Bokina, Frank Peticolas, Joe Krakauskas, Ken Raffenberger, Kendall Chase, Joe Sullivan and Harry Oates are due to scatter to the minors whenever Harris deems his squad unwieldy.

These are the lads who will be strictly on their mettle when the exhibition games start. They will be sent to the mound in rapid order and are expected to eliminate themselves with great speed.

"There are a few among the lot who surely have ability," said Harris. "But they are a year or two away from the big leagues. I mean fellows like Peticolas and Chase. You can't give up on those kind, but you can't tolerate 'em now either. With a year or two of seasoning, they'll probably be heard from."

Despite his present estimates of his rookie pitching crop, Harris is prepared for surprises.

Prepared for Surprise.

"You remember what happened last year," he said. "We never gave Lanahan or Coppola any consideration before the spring games started. And they turned out to be the best two rookies on the squad when they got in there. I hope I'm wrong about those other young lads."

Appleton and Weaver have the advantage of knowing how to pitch. Those 22 ball games Appleton won with Montreal last year were no myths and stand him as a tremendous recommendation for serious consideration. Weaver's prospects are featured by his brilliant pitching for Albany at the fag end of the 1935 season, when Clark Griffith scouted him and noted the apparent recovery of his speed.

Coppola and Lanahan exhibited enough talent to Harris last year to stamp them as the outstanding pair among the younger rookies. Bothered by a sore arm after shutting out the Red Sox with four hits in his first start on the mound, Coppola was of little help to the team thereafter, but once in his best condition he may be a powerful addition to the staff.

Bigger and Stronger.

Lanahan showed Harris enough speed and curves in his few outings with the Nats last year to merit consideration despite his defeats. Bigger and stronger, the Washington lad will be given a thorough trial this season.

Wet grounds delayed the Nats' workout today until this afternoon and caused a postponment of batting practice. But Harris was gratified by the infield drill in which Cecil Travis, at shortstop, and Buddy Lewis, at third base, let out a notch and treated the Nats' bosses and spectators to a half hour of clever play. Roberto Estallella was at second base during the workout, and the Cuban eliminated himself as a second-base candidate with great rapidity.

Among the spectators at today's practice session were Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball, and Alva Bradley, owner of the Cleveland club. Landis is on tour of the big league camps after a vacation at Belleair following a siege in the hospital. Bradley is inspecting nearby Sanford as a probable training camp next year.

Duke Entries Win in Five Classes

Maryland and Clemson Have Three Men Each in Semifinals.

Gormley Will Oppose Matulewicz; Favorite at Heavy Odds.

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Feb. 28.—The clouting Cavaliers of Virginia were well on their way toward a sixth consecutive Southern Conference championship tonight as a halt was called at the end of preliminary skirmishing in the annual tournament.

The host team perched securely at the top of the championship scale with six men qualified for the semifinals and Freddy Cramer, defending heavyweight champion, already in the finals of his division by virtue of a clean-cut decision in the lone preliminary.

But dogging the title holders' heels are the bruising Blue Devils from Duke, who are still very much in evidence with four men in the semifinals and one, Joe Matulewicz—a cinch to win the light-heavyweight crown—in the finals. The championship fight appears to be a strictly private affair between these schools, although those still having men in the running will have important roles in the spoils' final disposition.

Others on Fringe.

Maryland and Clemson, each of which placed three men in the semifinals and one in the finals, and North Carolina, with three semifinalists, are on the fringe of the picture. Theirs is a hopeless cause, however, if today's fighting is an indication of what tomorrow will bring.

Maryland's remaining hopes are invested in the trim personages of Tom Birmingham, featherweight; Ivan Nedomatsky, 145 pounds; Mike Lombardo, 155 pounds, and Johnny Gormley, light-heavyweight. Gormley's opponent tomorrow will be Matulewicz. The Old Liner will be one of those name-your-own-odds shots. But he scored Maryland's first points tonight, knocking out Ray Haskell, of South Carolina.

Birmingham faces George Cary, a smart and rugged Virginian who weathered a flurry of kayo blows in defeating Jenkins, of South Carolina, by a knockout. Nedomatsky faces Bill McClung, another Cavalier who displayed championship form and a champion's punch in stopping Fisher, of North Carolina. Lombardo faces Joe Donovan, of V. M. I., whom he should take without undue difficulty, but there is trouble ahead in the finals, where he will get either Harlow, of Virginia, Nathans, of Clemson.

Pairings announced for tomorrow afternoon's semifinals give Duke a decided advantage over Virginia, as the Cavaliers have been pitted against dark horses who pack damaging wallops, while the Blue Devils sally forth against men they figure to beat.

Favorites in the various classes as the field goes into the last two sessions of fighting are Lorenzo Taylor, South Carolina, 115; George Cary, Virginia, 125; Jack Kneipp, Duke, 135; Farrar, Duke, 145; Harlow, Virginia, 155; Novich, North Carolina, 165; Matulewicz, Duke, light heavyweight, and Fred Cramer, Virginia, heavyweight.

Cary Stops Jenkins.

George Cary, Virginia featherweight, opened the night show with a technical knockout over Frank Jenkins, a good, tough battler, after 1:18 of the third round. It was an old-fashioned slugging match.

Cary lost the first round, as usual.

Indoor Tennis Play Opens Today

Mangin Will Defend Title; Three Foes Conceded Even Chance.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Gregory Mangin begins defense of his National indoor tennis championship tomorrow as contenders for the women's title wait until Monday to get away from the starting line. The championships are being run on a concurrent basis for the first time.

Mangin, ranked seventh nationally and winner of the championship in 1932-33-35, will defend against a field of 64, including at least three challengers given even chances of ending his reign.

The title-holder's principal threats are Karl Schroeder, the big Swedish star, who is making his American debut; Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., and Frank Bowden, of the Seventh Regiment Armory, T. C., where the "co-ed" championships will be played.

From a competitive standpoint, Schroeder is an unknown quantity in this country, but in Europe he is highly regarded in view of his victories over Jean Borotra, Christian Boussus and Baron Gottfried von Cramm.

Cox, O'Mahoney Clash Next Week

Bout Will Feature Arena Card on Thursday.

A buildup, which started long before Christmas, will be climaxed Thursday night at the Turner Arena when Kansas City Joe Cox meets Danno O'Mahoney, world wrestling champion, in the feature match of the weekly matfest.

Promoter Joe Turner had originally booked the champion and Ernie Dusek, but the Kansan registered such a vigorous protest that he won himself the title shot.

Substantiating his argument, Cox cited his recent victories over Ernie Dusek, George Zaharias and Sergei Kalmikoff.

Good Pitching Helps Catcher, Wynne Finds

This is the fourth of a series of articles by Huck Wynne, Washington Post Baseball Association player, whose trial with the Nationals is being financed by The Post. Wynne will describe his experiences at camp.

By Huck Wynne.

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 28.—Maybe it's the environment, but somehow I feel like I'm a much better catcher here at the Washington training camp than I ever was on the Washington sandlots.

WYNNE.

I've been here less than a week, but I can feel a great improvement. Perhaps it's the fact that I'm handling better pitching. Even at this early date, the pitchers here aren't so wild as the fellows I used to catch on the sandlots.

It's easier to catch good pitching. I've found out. Good pitching makes a catcher look good. You don't have to be diving into the dirt for a lot of wild heaves or hopping around all over the plate for 'em.

And the way everybody peps it up in the infield practice kind of makes you snap into it, too. Fellows like Kuhel and Travis and Buddy Lewis are great targets to shoot at when you're slamming the ball around the bases. If it's a half-decent throw, they make it look good.

I had my first disappointment today since I came South. There I was all ready to take my turn behind the bat for the first time when Mr. Griffith and Mr. Harris decided upon a postponement. Oh, well, I'll be in there in a day or two.

My blues were soon dispensed, however, when Mr. Harris came over to me and said not to be downhearted. He also told me that Washington could use two and maybe three good catchers and that I had as good a chance as anybody of making good. Gee, he's a swell guy.

Jake Powell, the only other native Washingtonian outside of Dick Lanahan and myself, has given me several pep talks and I don't mind telling you they have helped me no end. Dick told me yesterday that Jake's words of encouragement did him a world of good when he first started in.

Newsom Reports Today for Parley

Is Ready to Talk Terms, He Wires Griffith.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28.—Big Buck Newsom made the first concession in his salary battle with Clark Griffith, Washington club owner, when he notified Griffith he would report here tomorrow to discuss terms.

Newsom previously had stated he would not leave his Hartsville, S. C., home until his demands for a $12,000 salary were met. Griffith, who had offered the big pitcher $9,000, advised him not to report unless he was prepared to sign a 1936 contract at that figure.

In his telegram to Griffith, Newsom did not indicate that he was prepared to sign. He simply informed the Nats' owner that he would stop here en route to a vacation in Miami, and would be glad to discuss his contract.

Crosby's Horse Pays $79 Mutuel, but Not to Bing

Hollywood, Feb. 28 (AP).—Bing Crosby's Aunt Kitty paid $79 for $2 today—but not to Bing.

Aunt Kitty is the singing movie actor's horse, not his relative. Since the Crosby colors had not been in the foreground in any previous race at the current Santa Anita meeting, the owner was caught unprepared when Aunt Kitty romped home a winner in the first event.

Nassau, Bahamas, Feb. 28 (AP).—W. H. Hyde, of New York, today won the Bahamas Open Golf Tournament, defeating John Creighton, of Nassau, 5 and 3, in the 18-hole final.

Discovery Out Of Today's Handicap

Trainer Says Ace 'Is Out of Shape;' Time Supply to Meet Star Field.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 28 (AP).—Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery was withdrawn today from the $10,000 added San Juan Capistrano Handicap because the 1935 handicap champion was reported out of shape by Trainer Bud Stotler.

Time Supply, Azucar and Whopper will top the field of star performers in tomorrow's grand finale of Santa Anita's racing season.

The switch in plans cost Vanderbilt $50, the amount required to put Discovery's name through the entry box.

Race Retains Class.

Despite the fact that Discovery, A. A. Baroni's little Top Row, victor in last week's Santa Anita handicap, and Rosemont, third in the event, will not run tomorrow, the mile and one-furlong test retains at least a portion of its original class.

Starters and weights announced today were:

Time Supply, 120; Azucar, 118; Whopper, 112; Singing Wood, 109; First Minstrel, 109; Tick On, 106; Ariel Cross, 102; Scotch Bun, 102; Preeminent, 12; Pompey's Pillar, 104, and Ann O'Ruley, 98.

Time Supply, Mrs. Frank Carreaud's runner-up in the "hundred grand," won't have another chance at the Baroni giant-killer, but he has prestige—and $10,000—to reap tomorrow. Fred M. Alger, jr's., Azucar, a surprise fourth in the big race, has a personal issue to settle.

Bob Tow K.O.'s Thurer in Fourth

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP).—Bob Tow, Alexandria heavyweight, packing a weight advantage of almost 19 pounds, knocked out Dick Thurer, of New York, in the fourth round of a six-round semifinal bout to the Lorenzo Pack-Frankie Edgren main event before a crowd of 10,162 fans in the Chicago Stadium.

Thurer gave Tow a lively battle until the big Southerner, who scored a surprise victory over Tom Beaupre in his last start here, dropped him with a right to the chin early in the fourth.

Tow weighed 201¼ pounds, Thurer 182½.

The Pack-Edgren bout was halted in the sixth round and declared "no contest." Weighing 223 pounds, Pack had given Edgren a beating all the way, scoring a knockdown for a nine count in the second, when Referee Norman McGarity suddenly stepped between the two fighters after 1 minute and 37 seconds. McGarity said after the bout he had warned Pack three times to let go with his punches.

Skating Star to Quit.

Paris, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Karl Schaefer, of Austria, who took a commanding lead today in defense of his world figure skating crown, announced tonight that he will retire from competition after the current championships.

"I'm tired out after so many years of competition," said Schaefer, who won the title at the recent winter Olympic games.

Patty Berg in Final; Miss Miley Is Upset

By the Associated Press.

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Feb. 28. Despite a driving rainstorm, Patty Berg today evened par on the Ormond Beach course to defeat Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., 9 and 7, and advance to the final of the South Atlantic Women's Championship Golf Tournament.

Patty's opponent in the final Saturday will be Lucille Robinson, of Des Moines, Iowa, who eliminated Marion Miley, the defending champion, one up after 19 holes.

Miss Cothran faltered today after her subpar play yesterday, when she defeated the veteran, Mrs. Opal S. Hill.

Show Excellent Form.

The Greenville player was seven down at the turn with an approximate 54 strokes, while Patty's 40 was just two over par, despite the rainstorm. Miss Cothran braced when the sun came out at the tenth hole and collected pars on 10 and 11, but Patty snapped in a couple of birdies to end the match.

Miss Miley waged an uphill fight in a vain effort to stop Miss Robinson. The defending champion was 1 down at the turn with her three over par 42, and lost the eleventh and twelfth holes to go 3 down. They halved the thirteenth with birdie 3s, and Miss Miley won the 417-yard fourteenth with a birdie 4. Her par 3 took the 175-yard fifteenth. She evened the match with another birdie on the par 4 sixteenth.

Miss Robinson Gets Eagle.

Miss Robinson got an eagle 3 on the seventh to go 1 up when Miss Miley got a par 5.

Miss Miley evened the match with a birdie 4 on the eighteenth, where Miss Robinson took a 6.

On the extra hole Miss Miley got into a trap and needed two strokes to get out. Then the ball traveled across the green and rested on a knoll just off. She came back 3 feet past the cup and, lying 5 while Miss Robinson was 4 feet from the pin in 3, conceded the match.

6 Colleges' Ring Teams Barred From N.C.A.A. Olympic Trials

By a Staff Correspondent.

MEMORIAL GYMNASIUM, Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 28. A half dozen colleges with organized boxing teams, or at least a few rugged individuals with a flair for fisticuffing, have been barred from participating in the forthcoming National Collegiate A. A. Olympic tryouts scheduled here March 27 and 28, it was learned tonight.

The schools affected are Columbus University, harder hit than any other by the ruling; American University, George Washington University, Western Maryland, Richmond and William and Mary.

James G. Driver, chairman of the tournament committee, who made the announcement, pointed out that the measure was not discriminatory, inasmuch as these schools are not members of the N. C. A. A. The tournament is closed to member schools. All, however, are eligible, but simply neglected to submit applications.

Western Maryland, although a member of the National Intercollegiate Association, which also numbers Bucknell, Penn State, Temple, Syracuse and Navy among its members, will be forced to enter its candidates for the Olympic team in A. A. U. tryouts scheduled in its territory. The same avenue also is open to the Columbus team.

Ritzenburg Brothers Will Play for Devitt

The Saint Albans tennis team, District Prep School League champion, probably will experience a change of heart about quitting the group because of lack of competition when it learns that the Brothers Ritzenberg — Nate and Allie—have matriculated at Devitt.

Two of the most brilliant young netmen in Washington, the Ritzenbergs announced yesterday that they are going to win the prep title for Devitt, or else—. At any rate, Guida C. Callan, president of the Prep School League, is looking forward to the most competitive season in history.

Bearded Matman 'No Spikk Ingles,' So No Interview

When Sergei Kalmikoff, the wired-for sound, overstuffed Chaplin, who wrestles and makes faces for a living, does not wish to be interviewed—he will not be interviewed.

This was proven Thursday night after Kalmy had been tossed by Joe Cox at Turner's Arena. An enterprising reporter entered the dressing room bent on getting an interview.

"No Spikk Ingles," Sergi countered in response to a request for his views.

A Russian fight manager, who was standing nearby, came to the reporter's assistance, explaining to the bearded wrestler in very fluent Russian what was wanted.

Kalmy hesitated, but only momentarily, then wheeled on the Russian fight manager.

"Whassa matter?" he demanded. "You no spikk Ingles?"

P. S.—The reporter did not get the interview.

Dizzy Dean Eyes Furniture Store Career; Would Compromise, But Must Get a Raise

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 28.—The "Dizzy" Dean holdout situation began to look alarmingly genuine tonight.

The loquacious St. Louis Cardinal hurler not only talked sincerely of quitting the diamond "for at least a year," but started dickering for a hand in other interests.

The local holdout group also includes brother Paul (Daffy) Dean and Frank (Pinkey) Higgins, brilliant Philadelphia Athletic third baseman.

"Dizzy" let it slip that he was to meet R. A. Slack, of St. Louis, a furniture man, here tonight. Earlier he had said he probably would go in business with Slack if forced to quit baseball because of the Cardinals' failure to meet his $40,000 salary demand.

"I'm willing to compromise with the Cardinals," said Dean, "but I'm waiting for them to jump first. No, I don't want to say what my compromise would be—but I'll be fair."

He said he had received only one offer from Branch Rickey, vice president and general manager of the Cards, and that called for his last season's salary of $18,500.

"Why it's outrageous to think the league's leading pitcher shouldn't get a raise after winning 28 games," sputtered the Dizzy one.

"I've always let Mr. Rickey set the salary figure and I've always signed, but this is one time they're coming round to see old Diz. I don't have to pitch for nobody. Listen, I could make that $18,500 in darn near a month in radio, barnstorming trips and the furniture business.

"And while I'd be making my money Mr. Rickey would be losing close to $250,000, because the Dean boys weren't out there winning his 50 games for him."

Brother Paul, too, wants more cash and is being stubborn about it. It's the farm for him if he doesn't get the right deal.

However, "Dizzy" wants it plainly understood there is no collusion.

"Dizzy" goes to Houston tomorrow to see his father and then will leave for Bradenton, Fla., his home. "Not to play baseball—just to fix up my income-tax report."

Meanwhile, Higgins continued to work out with early arrivals in the Dallas Steer camp and refuses to sign unless the Philadelphia Athletics offer him more than last year's $10,000.

Rockville Upsets Investigation Blues, 22 to 21, in Tourney

Hirschberger Proves Star Of Victory

Young Guard Scores 13 Points in Thriller; Twin Oaks Win.

ROCKVILLE'S "Iron Man" team, five players who went the full 40 minutes without a substitution, threw a bombshell into the ranks of the favored Bureau of Investigation Blues last night at Heurich's gym in the District A. A. U.-Post Basketball Tournament, and exploded the championship aspirations of the G-Men with a rousing 22-21 victory.

Two deft flips of the ball propelled from the arrow-like arms of blond little Horace Hirschberger, former Rockville High School star, in the last two minutes of play enabled the Montgomery County boys to create the biggest upset the unlimited division has witnessed since The Post games started 12 days ago.

It was little Hirschberger with his unerring eye who pulled Rockville from behind in the first half into a 9-all tie, and who crashed through with the tying and winning goals.

Rings Up 13 Points.

A whirling dervish, he rang up 13 points to raise his total for the two games to 27.

With Hirschberger leading the offensive, Jim Forney, center, a former Western High player, gave a brilliant exhibition of floorwork and passing, and the two played havoc with the former college stars that are the G-Men Blues.

So thrilling was the game that with a minute to go, the G-Men, led by Walter Morris and L. Thompson, scored four points to come within a point of tying the fast-flying Rockville boys. With 15 seconds to go, Morris, the former Georgetown captain, stood on the foul line and let fly with a free throw that would have tied the game. But the ball teetered on the brink of the basket, and dropped off into the hands of a Rockville player—and with that went the hopes of the G-Men.

The Twin Oaks Black Hawks, defending A. A. U. 145-pound champions, got off to a winging start by downing Georgetown Boys Club, 37-18. Lassie, with 13 points, led the champions' attack.

Because of the death of the mother of Finis and Bill Parrish, stars of the Ramblers' team, the game between the Bureau of Investigation Whites and the Ramblers was postponed. The game will be played next week.

No games are scheduled tonight in the A. A. U.

Northeast Boys Club and Young Men's Club reached the finals of the 136-pound class. Northeast defeated Langley Aces, 53-13, and the Young Men's Club took the Southeast Businessmen, 30-7. In the 115-pound semifinals, Northeast Boys Club eliminated Georgetown Boys Club, 31-12.

but put on pressure in the second as they blasted one another with rights to the head and body that would have cracked a cast-iron plate. The Cavalier caught Jenkins with another punishing right to the body and followed with still another to the head that finished him.

Tom Birmingham, Maryland's entry in the same division, scored his team's first victory of the meeting as he outpointed Bobby Price, of Duke, by a narrow margin. Birmingham started slowly, but gathered momentum as he swung into the second round, forcing all of the fighting. He was the aggressor throughout.

Spurred On by Injury.

Price gave ground throughout the final round and was stung by a looping right to the face. Birmingham finished with blood streaming from a cut over his left eye, but the injury only spurred him on to greater effort.

Johnny Gormley, Maryland's 175-pound entry, presented the Old Liners with three points toward the championship, when he scored a third-round technical knockout over Ray Haskell, South Carolina delegate. Haskell simply was overmatched and too inexperienced to do himself any good and fell easy prey to Gormley's round-house right.

Ed Fletcher Is Beaten.

Ed Fletcher, a rookie making his debut in Maryland livery, lost to Capt. Cliff Henley, of Clemson, who used his greater experience to better advantage in outpointing him. Fighting every inch of the way, Fletcher scored a hit with the crowd and he was given a tremendous ovation as he left the ring.

The Old Liner caught his opponent with a wild right in the first round that put him down for a brief count, but he bounced up fighting. It was just a trifle off the bull's eye or it might have decided the issue then and there.

Freddy Cramer, Virginia's defending heavyweight championship who had so many legs on the trophy it resembles a centipede, punched out an easy decision over Marvin Ray, of North Carolina, in the final scrap of the evening. Cramer was far superior to the other party in the ring and actually seemed to dislike hitting him.

Of the eight afternoon bouts, Clemson, a rank outsider, won two, sharing honors in the preliminary going with North Carolina, whose men also came off victorious in two engagements. South Carolina, Duke and Virginia took one each, while V. M. I.'s only two entries were eliminated.

Maryland's slim hopes of upsetting the pre-tourney dope were dealt an almost fatal blow as Capt. "Spike" Webb, performing in the lightweight division which was championed last season by his teammate, Ivan Nedomatsky, lost to Bubber Dawson, of Clemson, in a fast bout. Ed Shegogue, bantamweight, also was eliminated by Lorenzo Taylor, South Carolina, the favorite.

May Swing Tide.

The result of this one bout may swing the tide of the tourney in Virginia's favor, inasmuch as Harlow is conceded an excellent chance of hurdling Nathans, of Clemson, to gain the finals.

But the Old Liner rallied in the second and drove his rival before him with a punishing body attack that evoked a salvo of applause from the gallery. They stood toe-to-toe and fired away with both hands throughout the third round, when both almost collapsed from exhaustion.

Webb lightly tossed away his chance of whipping Dawson as he pranced through the first round without landing, or even trying to land, a telling blow, and the Clemson delegate got off to a good lead.

The Terrapin ringleader came half way out of his shell in the second round and stabbed Dawson with a few left jabs, but he took a volley of hard rights to the body in exchange and consequently entered the final round needing a knockout to win.

Afternoon Results.

115-pound class—Lorenzoe Taylor (South Carolina) defeated Ed Shegogue (Maryland), three rounds.

115-pound class—Ted Boselli (Clemson) defeated Charles Hull (V. P. I.), three rounds.

125-pound class—Fred Hall (V. P. I.) defeated Joe Bell (V. M. I.), three rounds.

125-pound class—Ernie Eustler (North Carolina), defeated Jack Murray (Clemson), three rounds.

Episcopal Five Ends Season Tonight

Special Dispatch to the Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Feb. 28.—Episcopal High School's basketball team will close a successful season at the Hilltop tomorrow afternoon when it entertains the Woodberry Forest Prep School cagers. The long-standing rivalry that has existed between the two schools for more than a quarter of a century probably will draw one of the largest crowds of the season.

Tomorrow's game will have a direct bearing on the outcome of the Virginia State Prep School title race. Episcopal has defeated Staunton, St. Christopher and Virginia Episcopal and has one loss against it in State competition, a defeat at the hands of the Augusta Military Academy five. Woodberry also has lost one game.

Pinehurst Golf Is Won By Dunlap and Davidson

Pinehurst, N. C., Feb. 28 (AP).—The low-handicappd team of George T. Dunlap, jr., former amateur champion, and R. P. Davidson, of Washington, won the annual spring golf tournament here today with a 5-and-4 victory over F. T. Wheeler, of Plainville, Conn., and C. E. Sherman, of East Orange, N. J.

Juniors Will Meet.

Heurich Seeks Revenge Over Bridgeton

Will Try to Stop Advance of Weiner, Former C. C. N. Y. Ace.

THE job of shackeling the sharp shooting Albie Weiner, formerly of City College of New York, will be that of the Heurich pro basketers tomorrow when they meet the Bridgeton Pros at 3:30 p. m. in the Heurich gym.

It was Albie who played nemesis to the Heurichs twice before this season, once in their first game when the Bridgeton Pros defeated the Brewers, 25-16, and again when the Masked Marvels came here. Each time it was Weiner who contributed the most points. He made 10 as a Bridgeton forward and 14 as a Masked Marvel.

Tomorow afternoon he will be a Bridgeton again and will be up to Veteran Ralph Bennie to check this 20-year-old forward's advances upon the net.

The Bridgeton Club will consist of Weiner and Schulthe at forwards, Moore at center and Danowitz and Zuber at guards. The Heurichs will play Russell and Wilson at forwards, Ingham at center and Yowell and Bennie at guards.

One of the best preliminary games ever staged here will bring together Delaware & Hudson and Resettlement Administration. D. & H. has only to defeat the Government boys tomorrow to win the trophy and silver basketballs awarded to the runner-up in the Heurich cup series, while Resettlement must defeat Coalmen tomorrow and again next week to clinch the runner-up berth.

At 1:30, Fort Washington and Senate Beer will engage in the opening contest.

Hyattsville Five Wins Over Laurel

The regular scholastic basketball schedule of the Prince Georges County League, except for a few scattered games postponed because of inclement weather, closed yesterday, with Hyattsville walloping Laurel on the latter's floor, 40 to 12. Mostow and Baldwin set the pace for the winners.

Baroni Has $50,000 to Prove Top Row's Victory 'No Fluke'

By the United Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 28.—Horsemen were waving currency around like bunches of lettuce tonight in a "put-up-or-shut-up" embroglio that may bring together three of the greatest handicappers in the country in a $150,000 "grudge race."

Top Row, son of Peanuts, which won the $100,000 added Santa Anita handicap last Saturday in a skirmish as wild as a steer-riding contest, is the center of the dispute.

The horses likely to race him are Discovery, the Red Raider of Sagamore, and Azucar, lean-limbed steeplechaser, who turned handicapper last year and won the first $100,000 Santa Anita race.

If the race is held—and it is worthy of note that thus far none of the sportsmen have laid a nickel on the line—it may add an epic to turf history that can be rated alongside of immortal match races of the past—Man O'War against Sir Barton and Zev against Papyrus.

Leading figure in the "grudge" is Albert Anthony Baroni, former vegetable vendor and one-time taxicab king of Reno, Nev., who ran a $3,500 investment on Top Row, a selling plater claimed at Narragansett three years ago, into a $209,000 cash return.

Baroni is the only person, who has threatened to produce real cash. He offered to put up $50,000 of his handicap winnings in a match race against any animal that ran in the Santa Anita, as a retort to insinuations Top Row outscuffled better horses to win.

Neither Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, owner of Discovery, nor Fred M. Alger, jr., of Detroit, Azucar's owner, has made any public announcement about calling Baroni's bet.

But it is pretty well known along the horse barns at Arcadia, Calif., where these gentlemen moor their strings, that both would like an opportunity to race the pint-sized son of Peanuts once more in a show-down—particularly for a jackpot running into six figures.

Time Supply, Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's entry, which apparently was the only horse actually abused by Top Row, when he shouldered his way through rough going to take the lead in the stretch, won't enter the grudge race. He may meet Top Row in a $25,000 match race at Narragansett this spring.

Camps

How Will Cronin Handle His Stars? Rivals Ponder.

By the Associated Press.

SARASOTA, Fla., Feb. 28.—The rest of the American League is having a fine old-time speculating on how Joe Cronin is going to get along with his crew of 1936 "prima donnas."

"Sure, Joe's got the ball players," is the whisper going around some of the rival camps, "but how's he going to handle 'em? That's a fancy-priced crew. Some of those fellows have notions of their own about things. You just wait and see."

Last year the Red Sox sported such celebrities as left-handed Moses Grove and Wes and Rick Ferrell, to say nothing of the fleet but temperamental Bill Werber.

This season no less than $400,000 worth of new talent has been added in Jimmy Foxx, Johnny Marcum, Roger Cramer and Eric McNair, all first-water stars, even if they did come from the last-place Athletics.

What's going to happen with all these high-salaried performers on one ball club?

The question seems to be bothering some of the other managers much more than Cronin, to whose lot falls the training and direction of the menagerie.

Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, Calif., Feb. 28 (AP).—Charles "Chuck" Klein, the $110,000 "bust" of the Chicago Cubs, today served warning that he was about to do some real busting this year.

The big Hoosier boy, who "came back" in the fifth game of the World Series with a home run that stretched the series into six games, belted out no less than five "homers" today in his first practice of the 1936 season.

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—"Hank" Greenberg, lanky Detroit Tiger first baseman, has sent word he'll report to training camp March 8 regardless of whether he has signed a 1936 contract by that time.

Greenberg's wrist, broken in the second game of the World Series last fall, has completely healed.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—The Boston Bees went through a long drill today before a large crowd that included Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston, here on a vacation.

New Orleans, Feb. 28 (AP).—Joe Becker, catcher drafted from the San Francisco Club of the Pacific Coast League, drew the attention of Manager Steve O'Neill at the Cleveland Indians Training Camp today.

Eyeing Becker, who batted .370 last year, O'Neill said:

"It looks as if the kid might be a good natural hitter.. You'll never see a better cut at the ball than he takes, and, what's more, he hits it."

Bradenton, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP).—There is such a thing as running and sliding to a pennant, Frankie Frisch believes, so much of today's drill in the Cardinals' spring camp centered on speed on the base paths.

Brooklyn Bows To Columbus Ringmen

Two Forfeits, Odd Mishap Help Washingtonians Rout Invaders.

By Bill McCormick.

AIDED and abetted by two forfeits and a peculiar accident that removed the last vestige of chance for the opposition, the Columbus University boxing brigade scored an easy 6-to-2 victory over Brooklyn College before a near capacity crowd at Turner's Arena last night.

Columbus' passive victories took place in the lightheavy and heavyweight classes in which the Brooklynites were not represented. The accident, which deprived the visitors of what seemed a certain win, occurred in the featherweight bout as Sidney Willig dislocated his right shoulder, threw it back in joint, then dislocated it again all in the space of a few seconds, forcing Referee Constantine Placos to halt the action after 1 minute 43 seconds of the second round.

Fights in Crouch.

Until the unfortunate finish, Willig had been doing all right for Brooklyn against Henry Peterson, Columbus and Washington Golden Gloves star. Henry fought in a semi-Paolino crouch from which he emerged with wild rushes. Practically every time he emerged, Willig spanked him unmercifully with right hands, flooring him briefly in the first round and again in the second just before the shoulder went out of commission.

Irving Gordon, Brooklyn lightweight who had been undefeated in 30 starts, dropped a close decision to Leon Shub in the 135-pound division engagement. The two southpaws obviously were bothered by each other's portside stances and dedicated quite a few of their allotted fighting minutes to fiddling about at long range in obvious bewilderment. When they did mix, however, the action was fast and furious, with first one left-hand punch after another landing with telling effect. The result might have been a draw had not Gordon persisted in hitting and holding.

Cassen Surprises.

Phil Cassen, Brooklyn middleweight, was the recipient of a surprise verdict over Bob Grimm, who was disqualified with a bit more than 30 seconds remaining of the third round for unnecessary roughness. After holding Grimm on fairly even terms in the first round, Cassen trotted out for the second almost too tired to hold up his hands. Whereupon Grimm belabored him unmercifully.

Grimm was spanking him even more unmercifully in the third round when the referee ran up the cease firing signal—then walked over to hold Cassen's hand aloft. During the encounter Cassen had twice been wrestled to the floor, but the majority of those present were of the belief that he had fallen of his own inertia as Grimm pushed him out of clinches and that he had not been intentionally shoved down.

125-pound class—Henry Peterson, Columbus (129), won on technical knockout from Sidney Willig (124); 1:43 of second round.

135-pound class—Leon Shub, Columbus (139), won decision from Irving Gordon (139).

145-pound class—Robert Rawson, Columbus (149), won on technical knockout from Louis Kemelhor (149), 1:57 of first round.

155-pound class—Joseph Tocci, Brooklyn (155), won decision from Lionel Meunier (156).

165-pound class—Phil Cassen, Brooklyn (167), won on foul from Bob Grimm (168); Grimm disqualified for unnecessary roughness after 1:27 of third round.

175-pound class—Columbus won on forfeit.

Heavyweight class—Columbus won on forfeit.

Final score: Columbus, 6; Brooklyn College, 2.

St. John's Wins 25th, Downs Gaithersburg

St. John's won its twenty-fifth victory of the season yesterday, adding Gaithersburg High to its list of victims for the second time with a 36-to-24 victory on the Montgomery County court. Both St. John's victories were by 12-point margins.

Borden and Edmonston End Their Careers in 38-31 Victory.

THE Western High basketball team climaxed its season yesterday at Garrett Park with a 38-to-31 victory over Georgetown Prep. It was the last game of the high school careers of Paul Borden and Bill Edmonston.

With the exception of a stirring rally midway in the third period, when the Little Hoyas, led by Higgins and Franklin, came from 13-21 to 19-21, the boys from across the creek experienced no anxious moments.

The Georgetowners started the game like a house afire, going to 15 to 3 at the quarter, 21 to 13 at halftime and 31 to 22 with one period to go. Individual honors went to Gerald Burns, who tallied 15 points for the winners.

Maryland Frosh Draw With Augusta Ringmen

Maryland Freshmen boxers closed their first season of outside competition by drawing with Augusta Military Academy, 4 to 4, in a keenly contested match last night in Ritchie Coliseum at College Park.

The deadlock gave the Old Line cubs a season's record of two victories and a draw in three starts.

Summaries.

115 pounds—McNaught (Md. Freshmen) defeated Cawthorne by technical knockout after 1 minute 20 seconds of second round.

125 pounds—Payne (Augusta) defeated Bradley on decision in three rounds.

135 pounds—Alperstein (Md. Freshmen) defeated Rossello on decision in three rounds.

145 pounds—Seddwick (Augusta) defeated Mause on technical knockout at end of second round.

155 pounds—Yates (Md. Freshmen) drew with Moulton in three rounds.

175 pounds—Sposoto (Augusta) won by default.

Unlimited—Ennell (Md. Freshmen) drew with Shires in three rounds.

Final score—Maryland Freshmen, 4; Augusta, 4.

Bethesda-Chevy Chase Beats Frederick, 45-23

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High sent its season's average over the .500 mark yesterday by closing the curtain with a 45-to-23 victory over Frederick High on the Leland Court. Putnam, Lozupone, Harris and Parks, all seniors, played their last game.

High Mabel Wins, Pays Record $268.10

Peggy Porter Is Beaten in Late Bid

Only $101 Is Wagered On Filly to Triumph at Hialeah Park.

By the Associated Press.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Feb. 28.—A record price for the season was established here this afternoon when High Mabel, a 2-year-old filly owned by C. H. Pat" Knebelkamp, of Louisville, Ky., drove to a hard earned victory in the 3 furlongs of the second race and paid $268.10 for a $2 straight ticket. The chestnut daughter of High Time-Mabel C. was making her first start in the field of a dozen maiden juveniles and was ridden by the veteran Georgie Rose.

John Hay Whitney's Peggy Porter, the favorite, just failed to catch the long shot victor, which won by a head. E. C. Sachse's Veiled Lady was beaten two lengths for the place.

Despite the slow condition of the track, caused by rain early today, High Mabel covered the distance in the excellent time of 0:34 flat.

The winner returned $82.30 place and $41 show. In all, $101 was wagered on the filly to win, $46 for place and $77 for show.

Rose broke the surprise horse third in a good start and rushed the mount to the front in a few strides. Veiled Lady ran head and head with the ultimate winner into the last furlong, while Peggy Porter was gaining another head away. The crowd expecte High Mabel to fold up and Peggy Porter to come on and win, but the Knebelkamp miss had ideas of her own and courageously held on to her narrow vantage in a desperate drive with her highly fancied rival.

High Mabel was the longest priced horse in the race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH MABEL, $268.10, $82.30, $41.00; PEGGY PORTER, $2.90, $2.70; VEILED LADY, $5.00.

HIGH MABEL, racing straight and true and showing excellent speed, took a slight lead in the opening furlong, rallied to a vigorous drive and barely lasted to stall off PEGGY PORTER. Latter, in close attendance of the leaders from the beginning, was strongly ridden and came determinedly nearing the end. VEILED LADY offered stout contention while on the outside of the leaders and finished with excellent courage.

WEATHER, RAINING.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds, maidens. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:28. Off at 3:34½. Winner, Branncastle Farm's b. h. (3), by The Challenger II—St. Frisca. Trained by Royal Roberts. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:14 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE MILLAY, $6.20, $3.90, $3.20; SHYNO, $10.90, $5.30; EXAGGERATION, $10.50.

THE MILLAY, away nicely and under striking distance of SHYNO, took command with a run midway of the homestretch, then was steadied along until the finish. SHYNO had good speed to gain command, was kept under strong urging, but could not stay when the winner challenged. EXAGGERATION, dropped back badly after breaking swiftly, settled in his stride and made up ground rapidly in the late stages.

TRACK SLOW.

FOURTH RACE—One mile; allowances. Bartow purse, $1,100. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:03. Off at 4:07. Winner, Wheatley Stable's ch. c. (3), by Diavolo—Rothermel. Trained by George C. Tappen. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:38 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAUST, $5.30, $3.30, $2.50; FIRST BID, $7.80, $3.60; TREBOR, $3.20.

FAUST, holding a position next to the inside while chasing along in pursuit of TREBOR, moved to the front midway of the backstretch, drew clear steadily when shaken up at the final bend and drew out decisively at the close. FIRST BID obtained racing room on the inside when bettering his position, rallied to punishment to outfinish TREBOR, but could not threaten the winner. TREBOR was under pressure from the beginning and had no excuses.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs; allowances. Lake City purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:38. Winner, Mrs. Charles S. Bromley's b. g. (4), by Cohort—Anna Leighton. Trained by L. P. Harlan. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:27.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRANNON, $4.10, $2.30, out; ROCK X, $2.90, out; LATE DATE, $6.00.

BRANNON, strongly urged from the beginning, appeared beaten when reaching the homestretch, but continued strongly when ROCK X began tiring and under a tenacious drive, was up in the last 20 yards. ROCK X, racing on the inside, saved ground, drew clear when leaving the backstretch, but weakened during the closing furlong. LATE DATE finished full of run and pulled up slightly lame.

SIXTH RACE—One mile; claiming. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:09. Off at 5:13. Winner, Mrs. N. E. Doyle's ch. f. (3), by Dunlin—Emerald Star. Trained by W. Durnan. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:40 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT EMERALD, $5.40, $3.40, $2.70; BUILDING TRADES, $5.40, $4.30; SMILIN' ED, $5.10.

BRIGHT EMERALD, suited by the footing and a strong factor in the early racing, displaced DAME QUICKLY without effort midway of the backstretch, saved ground and held on strongly to stall off BUILDING TRADES. Latter made repeated strong efforts after a contending position, but was unable to gain measurably on the winner during the closing drive. SMILIN' ED worked his way up stoutly and closed full of run in the last quarter mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles; claiming. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:38. Off at 5:40. Winner, P. Eaton's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PALASA, $5.80, $3.90, $2.60; CACHALOT, $7.30, $3.30; LADY COUVIN, $2.60.

PALASA, restrained off the pace for the first seven furlongs, gained a contending position when leaving the backstretch, took command shortly after and outstayed CACHALOT under a drive. CACHALOT, a very slow beginner and badly outrun in the first seven furlongs, circled his field and closed strongly. LADY COUVIN wore BOCASETTE down midway of the final turn, but had a lot taken out of her and she weakened in the last quarter mile.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, February 28.

The $10,000 added Widener Handicap to be run tomorrow carries with it a valuable old English trophy. Joseph E. Widener, proprietor of this track, obtained it in London last summer. The cup is by Paul Storr, 1810, and the owners who have seen it are eager to gain the first leg on it. Two victories, not necessarily in succession, will gain permanent possession. While the Santa Anita fans swear by the photographic finish, the fans here swear at it. However, the West Coast device is a far more reliable one than the "electric eye" used here. The majority of regulars here prefer to take the judges' word. Brevity is being held a 7-to-5 favorite for the Florida Derby by the scattered few of the bookmakers who will take future bets on the race. "Suburban Benningite" wants to know the significance of the columns of numbers to the extreme left of our entries. They are for phone results. BILL.

First race — Tragedian appears well suited by conditions in the opener. He seems capable of handling the topweight to advantage at a mile. Sweet Guinea appears to be the one to beat. Polly Reigh to take care of the others.

Second race — Rushaway and Bright Plumage should battle it out for the chief award in this company and I expect them to finish in the order named. Bootless is a possible surprise, the Bradley horses having a habit of winning on Saturday, when the most money is bet.

Third race—Lolschen gets in this with a feather impost and I'm going to string along. Crowning Glory, the consistent fellow, and Back Log seem capable of holding the others safe.

Fourth race—Owaller should collect another set of brackets in this field. I see no reason for mistakes. Clouds and Sophia Tucker, scheduled to break from the outside, should be in the thick of the battle.

Fifth race—I'm going to take a shot at Steel Cutter in the day's big race. The holder of a track record here, the former Labrot horse has been groomed for this race. Stand Pat and Sablin, the Seagram entry, must be beaten, of course. Both are fit horses. I'm going to give Mantagna a money chance.

Sixth race—Silence III will have the turf under him and will like this long route. Fusco is dead fit and takes off weight. Infinitate for the minor award.

Seventh race—Taunton gets another chance. That last was an outing. Orinoco and Highest Point to win the place and show positions.

Best bet—Silence III.

So. Pac. Co. Net Up 474% in Year

New York, Feb. 28 (AP).—Southern Pacific Co. today reported net income of Southern Pacific Lines in 1935 amounted to $2,346,589, comwith $408,225 in 1934, an increase of $1,938,364, or 474.83 per cent.

For Southern Pacific Lines and all separately operated solely controlled affiliated companies, there was a consolidated net loss of $1,744,551, compared with a net loss of $3,907,604 in 1934. Net railway operating income of Southern Pacific Lines, amounting to $20,319,879, was larger than for any year since 1931, and compared with $17,003,657 in 1934.

Small Stores Gain 12.7 Per Cent Sales

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 28.—For 3,000 small independent stores, says Dun & Bradstreet, the average rate of increase in sales for 1935 over 1934 was 12.7 per cent.

The survey adds that this gain compares with an increase in industrial production of 14.1 per cent, in factory payrolls of 13.6 per cent and in agricultural income of 12 per cent.

C. & P. Tel. Net For January Rises $23,452

Number of Telephones in District Up 12,951 to 203,210.

Operating revenues of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. for January were $886,137, which compares with $834,549 in the previous January, according to the report filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission. Operating expenses, including interest, amounted to $703,756, compared with $675,980 the year before. Not operating revenues were $182,381 against $158,929 in January, 1935.

Taxes for January amounted to $72,183, as compared with $62,913 in January, 1935, an increase of 15 per cent. The cost of telephone plant in service on January 31, 1936, was $37,545,205, according to a statement made by John A. Remon, general manager.

Washington was served by 203,210 telephones on January 31, 1936, compared with 190,259 on the same date in 1935, a net increase of 12,951. Telephone calls in Washington in January were about 24,500,000, compared with about 21,200,000 during the same month last year.

Penn-Road Pays 203d Dividend

Philadelphia, Feb. 28. — Stockholders of the Pennsylvania Railroad will receive today checks for the 203d dividend paid in the company's history. The amount, $13,167,696, will be paid to 226,336 stockholders, located in all States of the Union and about 50 foreign countries. Nearly 97 per cent of the amount, however, will go to American holders.

The summary of the annual report contains a condensed income account, which shows that the railway operating revenues were $367,812,186, an increase over 1934 of 7 per cent. All the principal items of revenue, except express, showed increases, passenger earnings registering a gain for the second successive year.

Mesta Machine Net Highest on Record

Pittsburgh, Feb. 28. — Mesta Machine Co., of Pittsburgh, manufacturers of rolling mills and other heavy equipment for the steel industry, reports for 1935 the highest net earnings in its history, amounting to $3,114,527, after all expenses, depreciation and income taxes, equivalent to $3.11 per share on 1,000,000 outstanding shares. These earnings are approximately double those of 1934 which amounted to $1,517,249, equivalent to $1.47 per share.

Uncompleted business carried over into 1936 amounted to $8,164,878, compared with $2,347,007 carmied over at the beginning of 1935.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Upset by Selling Wave in Late Trading After Earlier Firmness.

New York, Feb. 28.—Stock-market traders had to bear up under a good deal, and they weakened in the last hour of the session. Selling grew rather heavy, sending the ticker tape several minutes behind the market. The cumulative effect of a huge new addition to taxes proposed by the President, and by another hint from the Federal Reserve Advisory Council that potential speculation ought to be curbed by cutting down excess reserves gave the bears an opportunity to charge.

Quiet strength in the first three or four hours of trading disappeared and although selling slackened after half an hour prices closed with considerable irregularity among the leading issues on a turnover of around 2,500,000 shares. May wheat closed half a cent lower at 100¼ cents a bushel.

Those who are in the market for inflation's sake saw in the tax scheme a counter-move against inflation, on the one hand, and a probable severe handicap to business and corporation earnings on the other, both influences watering down hopes of a continued rapid rise in prices. Government bonds, naturally enough, were firm on the expectation of taxes instead of new borrowing to cover a portion of the prospective deficits. Dollars were dull and a shade lower.

Inflation.

On the inflation side of market influences, the news of the day seemed to favor the conservatives who hope for ultimate budget balancing and stabilized currency against the side that thinks inflation will come before the business recovery can offset the effects of high Government spending. The President's proposal to raise more than a billion in new taxes to cover the rise in charges from soldiers' and farmers' bonuses, was reassuring so far as it went in contrast to borrowing or greenback money issues as substitutes.

Higher taxes at this time will nevertheless be no unmixed blessing. For one thing, much depends upon what sort of taxes Congress hits upon and how they are applied. Further burdens on certain forms of income and on business profits quite possibly will not only fail to produce the needed revenue, but they may slow down business enterprise to such an extent that the yield from all taxes will decline. If that happens the day of inflation will be hastened, however much it is true that to find the money as it is spent is a powerful means of holding down spending.

Taxes or Economy.

On another count the tax news was not altogether reassuring. It was stated in the Washington news that the President would seek to balance the 1937 budget—apparently that for the fiscal year July 1, 1936, to July 1, 1937. That effort was to be applied only to the ordinary budget, leaving the relief and special expenditures to go to the top of the deficit heap. In other words, no attempt is to be made to balance the budget for at least another fiscal year, for balancing the ordinary budget, giving due weight to the piffling arguments of Mr. Ickes, is no balancing at all.

The ordinary budget, that is, the every day running expenses of the Government, easily could be balanced with half the taxes already imposed, if ordinary judgment were available. What is sorely needed is the bringing of all expenditures of the Government to the limits of Government revenues. That ought to be an easy enough matter for the coming fiscal year, with business recovery having gone as far as it has, for revenues promise to reach a new peak, a total which many copetent students of the problem think will be sufficient to balance any budget that ever was meant to be balanced.

In short, if the Government with the revenues in sight for next year can't balance its budget—ord. and extraord.—it never can do so. Does it really wish to balance the budget when the only proper way to do so lies in cutting waste?

Cutting Excess Reserves.

Meanwhile, further evidence of conservatism in high quarters, even if, in the opinion of many, misdirected comes to hand. The Federal Reserve advisory council, it is reported, has recommended an increase in reserve requirements for the member banks, calculated to bring down the high total of excess reserves. The recommendation is striking, less for the fact that the council thinks excess reserves should be dragged down, than for the method promised. The choice of the reserve requirement method was one considered before by the council and rejected in favor of the sale by the Reserve system of some of its holdings of Government bonds

Margin Lows.

Changes in low prices were set in February by less than half a dozen stocks that will affect the calculation of maximum loan value next month, under margin regulations. That was the smallest number of changes since the present margin regulation was made. For the first seven days of March brokers may use the prices as of the end of January. The stocks to figure in the changes are: Columbia Pictures preferred, Fajardo Sugar, First National Stores and Schenley preferred. The Fajardo Sugar change was due to the 5 for 1 split in the shares. Newcomers to the Stock Exchange were: Bethlehem Steel 5 per cent preferred, Fajardo Sugar, Goebel Brewing and Keystone Steel & Wire. Low prices for Goebel Brewing and Keystone were unaffected, as the stocks had been dealt in on the Detroit and Chicago exchanges, respectively.

Passenger Fares.

The cut to 2 cents a mile in railroad passenger fares for Eastern lines and the reduction in Pullman charges, ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, gave the market no great surprise. The order had been foreshadowed a few months ago by a special examiner's report. The lower rates for long have been effective in the South and West and the consensus is that they have helped railroad earnings and proved to be a good weapon to combat the encroachments of bus operation. Some railroad managers feel the same will prove to be the case for Eastern roads, although the New Haven, for one, with a large proportion of its revenues coming from passenger traffic, thinks otherwise. The belief in Wall Street is that the lower rates will have to be accepted, and railroad shares, which in the early trading had risen strongly, were not bothered much by the rate news. Pullman dropped a point or so, but recovered.

Sales Volume.

Stock turnover for the 23 trading days of February will be approximately 61,000,000 shares, the largest since 1931, when sales were 64,000,000 shares. The record for the month was set in 1929, with 78,000,000 shares. With the exception of January, the turnover this month will be the largest for any month since July, 1933, thanks largely to the excitement in public utility and other low-priced stocks. The hourly average for volume in February turns out to be larger than that of the preceding month. January, with 26 trading days, including four 2-hour sessions, averaged 570,000 shares an hour. February will average 590,000 shares. The biggest day this month was the 17th—the day of the TVA decision — when 4,718,000 shares changed hands. That was the biggest day since February 5, 1934. The poorest day was the 26th, with 2,040,000 shares, when the market was feeling droopy.

Freight Traffic Is 6.1 Per Cent Over Last Year

Holiday Causes 7.1 Per Cent Drop in Week of Feb. 22.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended February 22 totaled 586,712 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 33,547 cars or 6.1 per cent above the corresponding week in 1935 and an increase of 11,804 cars or 2.1 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934. Loading of revenue freight for the week of February 22 was a decrease of 44,635 cars or 7.1 per cent below the preceding week due to the observance of Washington's Birthday holiday.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 201,390 cars, a decrease of 11,679 cars below the preceding week, and 8,263 cars below the corresponding week in 1935, but an increase of 5,550 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 131,805 cars, a decrease of 12,485 cars below the preceding week, 10,213 cars below the corresponding week in 1935 and 12,400 cars below the same week in 1934.

Coal loading amounted to 175,699 cars, a decrease of 16,822 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 48,644 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 19,399 cars above the same week in 1934.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 27,144 cars, a decrease of 965 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 1,035 cars above the corresponding week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 316 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended February 22, totaled 15,863 cars, a decrease of 98 cars below the same week in 1935.

Livestock Gains.

Livestock loading amounted to 10,117 cars, an increase of 142 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 1,121 cars below the same week in 1935 and 5,175 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western district alone, loading of livestock for the week ended February 22, totaled 7,307 cars, a decrease of 1,156 cars below the same week in 1935.

Forest products loading totaled totaled 24,393 cars, a decrease of 2,076 cars below the preceding week, and 1,461 cars below the same week in 1935, but an increase of 1,801 cars above the same week in 1934.

Ore loading amounted to 6,046 cars, an increase of 431 cars above the preceding week, 2,030 cars above the corresponding week in 1935 and 2,865 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Coke loading amounted to 10,148 cars, a decrease of 1,181 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 2,896 cars above the same week in 1935 and 80 cars above the same week in 1934.

All districts, except the Northwestern, reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding week in 1935. All districts, except the Northwestern and Southwestern, reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

Atlas Corp. Sells Am. Trust Control

San Francisco, Feb. 28 (AP).—Control of the $272,000,000 American Trust Co. crossed the continent from New York to San Francisco today in an $18,000,000 deal. The bank operates in northern Californa with headquarters in San Francisco.

Fred T. Elsey, president of the bank, said a syndicate of investment firms had purchased 50,000 shares of capital stock of the 75,000 owned by Pacific Eastern Corporation, which is controlled by Atlas Corporation, of New York. The syndicate is headed by Blyth & Co. F. B. Odlum, president of Atlas Corporation, said his firm would retain the one-third interest in common of the bank as an investment.

Standard Power Output.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Electric output of Standard Gas & Electric Co. for the week ended February 22, 1936, totaled 95,232,396 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 14.2 per cent compared with the corresponding week last year.

Grade Crossing Fatalities Higher

Reports for November, 1935, showed an increase, compared with the same month in 1934, not only in the number of highway-railroad grade crossing accidents, but also in the number of casualties, the safety section of the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday.

Fatalities resulting from grade crossing accidents in November, 1935, totaled 174, an increase of 6 over the number of fatalities in November, 1934. Persons injured in such accidents in November totaled 486, an increase of 48 compared with one year ago. In November, 1935, there were 412 highway-railroad grade crossing accidents, an increase of 20 compared with November, 1934.

Fatalities resulting from highway-railroad grade crossing accidents totaled 1,460 in the first 11 months of 1935, an increase of 83 compared with the number of fatalities in the corresponding period in 1934.

January Total OfUnemployed Increases 8%

Aggregate of 9,715,000 Is 6 Per Cent Less Than a Year Ago.

New York, Feb. 28.—The total number of unemployed workers in January, 1936, was 9,715,000, according to the regular monthly estimate of the National Industrial Conference Board, made public today. This is an increase of 724,000, or 8.0 per cent, from the preceding month, and a decrease of 625,000, or 6.0 per cent below January, 1935.

From December, 1935, to January, 1936, the increases in unemployment, by industrial groups, were: trade, 502,000 and manufacturing and mechanical industries, 202,000, reflecting the usual decline in mercantile employment and the not infrequent decline in manufacturing employment after the Christmas season; transportation, 8,000; and miscellaneous industries, 20,000. Unemployment showed a decrease of 32,000 in domestic and personal service, and of 4,000 in mining.

Compared with January, 1935, unemployment in January, 1936, decreased 18.4 per cent in manufacturing and mechanical industries; 9.7 per cent in domestic and personal service; 5.0 per cent in transportation; 2.7 per cent in mining; 1.9 per cent in trade; and 5.4 per cent in miscellaneous industries.

The following table prepared by the Conference Board shows the number of unemployed workers in the various industrial groups in December, 1935 and January, 1936.

Number of Unemployed.

	Dec. 1935	Jan. 1936

New Ford Gas Plant Could Supply Detroit

Detroit, Feb. 28.—Sufficient gas to meet the average daily requirements of a city of 1,600,000 inhabitants will be available daily at the Ford Rouge Plant at Dearborn, Mich., when improvements to the plant gas system now under way are completed.

The average daily gas consumption in Detroit and several suburbs, embracing a population of 1,600,000, was about 55,000,000 cubic feet in 1934. With the installation of a large new gas compressor designed to pump about 20,000,000 cubic feet of gas a day, the Rouge Plant's compressor capacity will be boosted to about 56,000,000 cubic feet.

Distributors Group Publishes Survey

New York, Feb. 28. — Detailed comparison of the management results of 33 leverage type investment companies, 5 non-leverage companies and 18 mutual funds from 1926, or the date of the organization of the company, through 1935 has been released by Distributors Group, Incorporated.

The study includes cumulative records as well as year-by-year records, and is broken down to show the results during the bear market from the end of 1929 through 1932 and during the bull market of the last three years.

B. & O. Net Income Gains in January

Baltimore, Feb. 28.—Net railway operating income of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was $2,031,324 in January, a gain of $247,831 over the year before. Operating expenses for the month were $9,329,993, an increase of $1,127,816 over January last year.

On The Air Today

FOR several weeks the praises of Jack Hylton and his Continental Revue have been sounded in this space. Now comes word that the Hylton show, presented only in the Middle West for the last six months, invades the eastern part of the country.

When the Enlish orchestra leader came to these shores, he was under contract to a Middle West company and a result has been available on the air only to Washington listeners whose radio sets are capable of "bringing in" Chicago's WBBM, Detroit's WJR or other stations of the Columbia Midwest group.

But beginning April 5, Hylton; his blind pianist-composer, Alec Templeton; Pat O'Malley, tenor and dialectician, and others of the troupe will roll into the East (and the Far West, too) over a N. B. C. network. WMAL will be the Washington outlet. Hylton will replace "Life Is a Song," Sunday nights, at 9.

* * * *

Much could be said of Jack Hylton and his program and I already have indicated my decided approval of his type of entertainment. I sincerely believe his invasion of the East will at once contribute a new bright spot to your radio week.

The new "Ziegfeld Follies of the Air" really gets off to its premiere tonight, with the appearance of Fannie Brice in the cast. Last Saturday night Miss Brice was absent because of illness. The result was an unexpected shifting of the show's routine to fill the time as entertainingly as possible. Beginning tonight, it will be presented as originally laid out—with a skeleton of a plot and its highly-paid star in the cast. Everyone connected with the new show has labored long and conscientiously in an effort to produce something a little above the average in radio entertainment. It is not difficult to appreciate the discouraging situation presented last week with Miss Brice ill—and the alterations necessary as a result. It should be right tonight, however.

By Morgan Baker.

FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION, frequently in the limelight of criticism for its personnel policy since its inception June 24, 1934, once again is confronted with charges of political and geographical discrimination in its program of reducing administrative expenses 25 per cent to conform to the new budget.

BAKER.

FHA officials hold a consistent record for giving out contradictory statements regarding personnel practices. Yesterday afternoon, for example, FHA officials declared the force both in Washington and the field has been in the process of reduction since last June. Whereas, authentic figures obtained at Civil Service Commission indicates the opposite, showing an increase in the FHA staff from 3,230 employes last July to 3,818 employes December 31, 1935.

A new wave of complaints is arising from FHA employes to the effect that experienced and efficient workers from the District, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina are being replaced with people from States whose quotas are low in Government personnel.

Reports persist that FHA will dismiss a total of 450 employes in the next few weeks to conform to its 25 per cent budget cut. Whether the bulk of the dismissals will fall in the executive or rank and file class FHA officials decline to say.

Employes with civil service status, regardless of what State they are from, are bearing the brunt of the dismissals, according to E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes.

Mr. Babcock last night said:

" * * * civil service status alone, without indorsements of political character, appears to be almost a guarantee of prompt dismissal. * * * This action of FHA officials goes beyond prior demands of patronage pleaders. On behalf of patronage seekers it has been represented that employes of political views sympathetic to the FHA program should be taken into the service, but that they would be retained only on a basis of efficiency. Now it appears that efficiency is one of the last items considered in making up dismissal lists."

Other charges are outlined by the employe leader, as follows:

"On behalf of our federation I protest vigorously any dismissals made in FHA or elsewhere unless they are in accord with principles tending to promote governmental efficiency. The people of this country who pay the bills of these emergency units are entitled to definite knowledge that the less efficient employes are the ones who are affected by any dismissal program, and that the work of the agency will not suffer through political or partisan machinations.

"Particularly significant in the FHA procedure is the fact that immediate superiors were not consulted regarding dismissals; the employes were ousted by order of persons not directly familiar with their work or other conditions of their employment. In one instance of which I have heard, an employe was summarily dismissed at the same time that an increased salary had been recommended by the immediate superior.

"This sort of procedure is simply indefensible from the point of view of sound personnel administration and good government, and I feel that our Federation is serving the interest of the public in calling attention to it."

John Laurence (F), Supply Division, HOLC, popular barytone, will sing at the Texas State Society party tonight at the Mayflower Hotel.

$2,900 to $5,600 Jobs.

Applications will be accepted until March 23 for agriculturel research writer positions, with salaries ranging from $2,900 to $5,600 a year, for service at Agriculture, it is announced by Civil Service Commission.

Certain specified education and experience are required for these positions. Additional information may be obtained at Civil Service Commission, Seventh and F streets northwest.

The Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians is expecting a record crowd at its Leap Year dance tonight at the Hayloft, 1329 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

New Course Announced.

The landscape gardening course, under direction of Dr. L. C. Corbett, assisted by department specialists, will begin at 4:50 p. m., Wednesday, at Agriculture.

The course, classes of which will run each Wednesday and Friday, will cover the general principles of the art and will devote special attention to residential grounds, roadsides and small parks. Enrollment applications may be obtained at Room 2090, South Building.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C appears after your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 12 and 2 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, "Bring on the Dames" and other acts; screen, Warnex Baxter in "The Prisoner of Shark Island"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Mae West and Victor McLaglen in "Klondike Annie"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Mala in "Last of the Pagans").

Miss Fanny Neyman (C), Federal Communications Commission, will have a prominent part in the program of the Montana State Society dinner-dance tonight at the Hay-Adams House. Advance reservations indicate the affair will enjoy the largest attendance in the history of the society.

Baxter Scores In Historical Drama at Fox

Is Life Story of Dr. Mudd; Mae West at Palace; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the life story of Dr. Samuel A. Mudd, adapted to the screen by Nunnally Johnson, starring Warner Baxter, with Gloria Stuart, Claude Gillingwater, Arthur Byron, the late O. P. Heggie, Harry Carey, Francis Ford, Francis McDonald, John Carradine, Frank McGlynn, sr., Lelia McIntyre, J. M. Kerrigan, Ernest Whitman, Paul McVey and Etta Mc-Daniel. Directed by John Ford. Previewed Tuesday, February 25.

Bringing back vivid recollections of the same scene in the productions of "Abraham Lincoln," released as silent and talking pictures, respectively, by the Rocket Brothers for First National, and David Wark Griffith, with Walter Huston in the name part originally played by George Billings, "The Prisoner of Shark Island" opens with the realistic depiction of the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theater in this city, during a performance of Laura Keene in "Our American Cousin," on April 14, 1865.

John Wilkes Booth makes his escape from the theater and seeks medical and surgical aid from an obscure country doctor in Maryland, who sets his broken leg.

This unknown village physician was Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd. In the search for the conspirators believed to have plotted the murder of the President, Dr. Mudd is taken into custody and, instead of being hanged, as were his alleged accomplices—in one of the most gruesome scenes the cameras ever have had the temerity to record—is condemned to life imprisonment at Fort Jefferson, the American "Devil's Island," operated by the United States Government on the Dry Tortugas, just off the Florida Keys, at the time of the War Between the States.

Is Grim, Relentless Drama.

From this point on the story unfolded on the screen is one of horrifying brutality, grim tragedy and inspiring sacrifice. There is an outspoken frankness in the film's reproduction of the horrors of the military prison that impels one to feel considerable respect for its courage in attempting at this late date to correct a monumental injustice to an innocent man.

When the prison physician succumbs during an epidemic of yellow fever, Dr. Mudd, because he still is true to the pledges of his profession, takes charge and saves the lives of many of his fellow convicts, as well as the garrison that has heaped such bitter persecution upon him. It is this humanitarian act that results in his pardon.

Not only is "The Prisoner of Shark Island" specific in its exposition of the terrifying experiences to which Dr. Mudd was subjected, but it is as utterly candid in its setting forth of the fact that the eight conspirators tried for the plot that ended in the Wilkes Booth murder of Lincoln went before a court-martial that was practically under Federal orders to find convictions in every case.

In the title role, Warner Baxter brings to the screen the finest bit of melodramatic characterization he ever has done. The role is an exhausting one, but it is played with an unflagging spirit, a dramatic forcefulness and a deep emotionalism that stamp it as a fine achievement.

Providing the basis of the play's pathos is the ingenuous figure of Mrs. Mudd and the doctor's small daughter, played with fine effect by Gloria Stuart and the precocious little Joyce Kay.

Distaff Aids to Pathos.

There are any number of other excellent contributions to a gallery of portraitures that seldom has been surpassed in a screen subject of this character. Among the most engaging of these diversified efforts may be named the blustering Col. Dyer of Claude Gillingwater; the sycophantic Assistant Secretary of War, done by Arthur Byron; the late O. P. Heggie's kindly physician, Harry Carey's crusty commandant of Fort Jefferson, and John Corradine's Sergt. Rankin.

Francis Ford is in a serio-comic character role that he plays right up to the hilt and Ernest Whitman gives almost a Clarence Muse impersonation of Buck, the faithful slave. There are scores of others in the cast who do much to make this one of the outsanding bits of daring the screen has revealed in this generation.

The stage bill at the Fox this week provides a necessary antidote for the grim cruelties of the major feature. It is provided by that lively revue, "Bring on the Dames," in which Harry Savoy and Muriel Page are the co-stellar luminaries and in which Peter, the personality penguin, brought back from the Antarctic by the Byrd expedition, struts his stuff in a truly Chaplinesque manner.

No Ennui Here!

Harry Savoy is one of the stage's most reliable comedians and Miss Page a dancer whose rhythms are such as to dispel any idea of disinterestedness on the part of any audience.

A group of shapely line girls provide a pulchritudinous background for the agile goings-on of the principals, but if you think that handsome girl really is shot out of that cannon, in the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey manner, I might be induced to give you an argument.

Others who add to the gayety of this sprightly revue include Dixon and Pal, the last half of the act being a trained seal; Sylvia and Clemence, the Three Somer-Salts, a trio of acrobatic gobs; Louise Tobin, Irwin Lazarr, Mae Morgan, Don Arden and that aforementioned chorus of 22 line gals. All this adds up to something over an hour of fast-moving comedy, songs and dancing—plus Pete and his Antartic playmate.

A new issue of the Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's overture complete a bill that can be recommended to those who enjoy diversity and strong dramatic meat in their theater.

Is the Heroine of Grim Drama

In the tragic story of the life of Dr. Samuel A. Mudd, being presented on the screen of Loew's Fox Theater under the title of "The Prisoner of Shark Island," one of the most appealing figures is Dr. Mudd's staunch young wife, who wages a tireless battle for his pardon for a crime he never committed. This role is played by one of the most beautiful young actresses the cinema is able to boast. She is Gloria Stuart, a new and effective portrait study of whom appears above as the reason these lines have been written.

Palace

"KLONDIKE ANNIE." Paramount picturization of a play by Mae West based on a story by Marion Morgan and George B. Dowell, starring Mae West, supported by Victor McLaglen, Phillip Reed, Harold Huber, Conway Tearle, Lucille Gleason, Helen Jerome Eddy and Harry Beresford. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

Diamond Lil goes to the Klondike and instead of gold nuggets gets religion! The result is very amusing, but puzzling. It seems Mae West is going sissy on us.

After some very bad moments in the San Francisco Chinatown of the nineties, San Francisco Doll (that's Mae's name this time), has to stick a knife in a yellow gentleman's back, before he can stick it in her heart.

She flees to the Klondike aboard the Java Maid and, of course, the Maid has a Captain. Since he is Vic McLaglen, you can guess the rest of that. But what may surprise you is the fact that another passenger aboard ship is Sister Annie, evangelist, that she dies, that Doll takes her place and fills the settlement house to the rafters with her singing sermons. There is also another young man—a policeman!

Dangerous Topic.

Now religion is a dangerous and controversial subject—neither Joan Crawford nor Barbara Stanwyck was very happy in the pictures in which they got it; remember?

Mae West has never been a controversy. She has come right out and been herself. She meant what she said and lots more. She did all the wrong things, and won out.

And now she comes along in a problem play; the problem is, does she really get religion or not? One moment you think she has and squirm a bit; the next you're sure her tongue is in her cheek.

Parts of the picture are uproariously funny; most of it, except those lamentable Oriental ones, are amusing. Mae at times is herself, but at others is almost subdued enough to be any blonde actress. Vic McLaglen sees to it that her leading man is not subdued; he is, according to Doll, "not an oil paintin' but a fascinatin' monster." Phil Reed, the other man, tall, dark and handsome, is very gentle with the lady. There is a youngster in it with a handsome talent for the tale-bearing and money-making.

Mae goes pretty noble in the end. Next thing she may be murmuring, "Rags are royal raiment, when worn for virtue's sake."

Unique Revivals.

The revival meetings are swell—Gene Austin at the piano, Mae in the pulpit and one-armed men passing the collection plates!

The supply of compliments and adjectives for Mickey Mouse is exhausted and Silly Symphonies—they're the top. So now, simply, Mickey and Donald Duck and Company in "On Ice" is recommended. The tobacco - chewing fish are lovely. There is also a crime series short, "Hit and Run," which is interesting and has a very good actor in the role of the hit-and-runner. The newsreel completes the bill.

Columbia

"LAST OF THE PAGANS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of an original story and stage play by John Villiers Farrow, suggested by the novel, "Typee," by Herman Melville, featuring Mala and Lotus Long, supported by a large cast of Caucasians and French Polynesians. Photographed by Clyde DeVinna; musical score by Nat W. Finston. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Reviewed Friday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Quite a number of years have elapsed since the late F. W. Murnau brought to the screen his memorable idylls of native life in the remote regions of the globe. His last work, "Tabu," set a standard for such pictures that has not, to this time, been seriously threatened. For his effects, Mr. Murnau relied exclusively on the magic of the camera and the authenticity and sincerity of the "acting." No dialogue intruded into the gossamer loveliness of his pictures.

With so high a standard for the judgment of all subsequent pictures, it is very difficult to accord to "Last of the Pagans" any greater merit than furnishing a variation on the usual run of program pictures. Supposedly laid on the island of Tafoa, in French Polynesia, and peopled with an amazingly proficient group of natives, said not to be actors in the usual sense, the picture offers the story of wife-raiding and phosphate mining, with Mala, the star of W. S. Van Dyke's "Eskimo," and Lotus Long playing the principal roles.

How to Get a Wife!

In company with other bachelor natives, Taro (Mala) raids a neighboring island and gets himself a girl, Lilleo (Lotus), and returns to the home port with the girl who later would become his wife. One day, shortly after, a schooner sails into the placid bay and the captain entertains the natives, subsequently shanghaiing 30 natives, via the rum route, for an enforced five years of servitude in the phosphate mines. At the mines, Tora performs a heroic deed, and as a reward, Lilleo is sent for, only to be about to be sent back to her native isle when a violent storm wrecks the boat, from which she is ultimately saved by Toro. Together they sail away into the sunset to find happiness on their own island.

A dramatic story. "Last of the Pagans" loses a great deal of its potential power by being photographed with sound, plus a degree of theatricalism in the mob scenes that smacks of the Busby Berkeley influence. Fortunately, the natives speak a foreign language, but the stenciled subtitles add nothing to what an ordinary imagination could easily divine.

Photographcally the picture is little more than what might be imagined with a tropical—and jungle—locale, with no particular effort made for artistic effects. The musical score is well adapted to the action.

Tops on the program should probably be accorded "Hot Money," the last comedy effort of the late Thelma Todd, with the inimitable Patsy Kelly. Although the Misses Todd and Kelly have appeared in better productions than this one, it is, nevertheless, a fitting climax to the career of the blonde charmer.

The other supplementary attractions are "Easy Pickin's," a musical subject featuring the Cabin Kins, Tom Emerson's Band and Earle Gilbert, and a release of the Metrotone News.

Showboat Yarn Gives Richman Stellar Chance

Sings His Way to Favor in Musical Film on Screen at the Earle.

"THE MUSIC GOES 'ROUND." Columbia Pictures filmisation of story by Sidney Buchman, adapted to the screen by Jo Swerling, starring Harry Richman, with Rochelle Hudson and Walter Connolly, supported by Michael Bartlett, Douglas Dumbrille, Lionel Stander, Etienne Girardot and Walter Kingsford. Music and lyrics by Lew Brown, Harry Akst and Victor Schertzinger. Directed by Victor Schertzinger. Previewed Wednesday, February 26.

The star of Producer Bishop's enormous Broadway musical revue that had been in rehearsal so long, was close to a nervous breakdown—as who is not? So the boss gave him the afternoon off to go out in the car and catch himself some fresh air.

The next thing you know, he is driving his car into a village garage and heading for the Mississippi River landing where the Courtney Players' showboat is about to put on a performance. He signs on for $1 per night and is having himself a time, while Producer Bishop, back in New York, is tearing out what little hair he has left, throwing a few furtive fits and doing nip-ups on the sidewalks!

It turns out, finally, that Mr. Bishop locates his star, Harry Wallace, joins him in the South and agrees that the Courtney Players would be precisely the needed comedy fillip to "put over" the big revue that is still hanging fire.

And that is the way it eventuates. The Courtney Players think they are being taken seriously and quit the show after one performance when they decide that they are being kidded. Mr. Wallace, the great Broadway singing star, having fallen in love with Susanna, the charming Courtney daughter and leading woman, is on the spot.

Music, Yes; Story, No.

There you have the plot basis of this celluloid hybrid which is good only when there is singing going on.

There is, of course, an inevitable suggestion of Edna Ferber's and the late Flo Ziegfeld's "Show Boat" in this spotty film creation. Its prime assets are the songs sung by Harry Richman, in the role of Wallace, and the specialties that are introduced both on the showboat, by members of the Negro crew, and on Broadway, when the Bishop revue finally decides to get itself off to a flying start.

Among the specialists in the latter intervals of the film story are Mike Riley and Eddy Farley, creators of the goofiest song of the year, "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round."

They appear in one of the revue numbers in both instrumental and vocal interpretations of the song they wrote. Then the melody is passed around, as was remarked in these columns a day or two ago, to Herman Bing, the German dialectician; Michael Bartlett, the opera star; Harry Richman and the audience present at the play within a play. This is all very gay and amusing and gives the piece the biggest boost of its entire length.

Richmann Is the Star.

Harry Richman is a good enough actor to do everything there is to be done in the part assigned him by Columbia in this subject. Opposite him plays Rochelle Hudson, and, as her father, the Courtney of the showboat players, Walter Connolly contributes a portrayal that will not go down in history as one of his greatest.

There is a great deal that is repetitive in "The Music Goes 'Round" and almost as much that is utterly dull, but when Harry Richman gets going on his songs there is occasion for cheering and dancing in the streets. His principal number, reprised several times, is "Life Begins When You're in Love."

It is worth something to hear a voice like Michael Bartlett's sing "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round," and it is also worth something to follow Lionel Stander, the dumb fight handler of Harold Lloyd's "The Milky Way," through another of his delightfully obtuse portrayals.

Riley and Farley Repeat.

Adding a further note of repetitive redundancy to the week's bill, Riley and Farley, with their six-piece Onyx Club Orchestra, appearing in person as topliners of the stage portion of the entertainment, do largely in the presence of the audience what they already have done on the screen. In recognition of their contribution to the undying musical legend of America, or something, they are accorded a generous measure of applause.

The stage bill is opened by the "Hollywood Revels," a clever dance act, and the effulgent Miss Audrey Sieber then introduceds the real hit of the show—a young fellow by the name of Raymond Wilbert, who performs miracles with hoops, chattering like a humorous magpie the while.

Another song-and-comedy interval is afforded by Fred Lightner, nimble singing comedian, and his blonde partner, June Havoc, who would work that with practically anyone! Mr. Lightner later comes back and clowns with Riley and Farley and their diminutive band.

Newsreel and Freddie Clark's orchestral contributions round out a program which, now and again, stands in need of a little rounding out, if you know what I mean.

Broadway Returns to New York

By Ed Sullivan

New York, Feb. 28.

Perhaps I was looking at the Stem through rose-colored glasses last night, but it was like a shot in the arm to see the lights sparkling along the Queerialto, a tonic to be shoved and pushed and mauled by sidewalk crowds, a relief to the ears to hear Tin Pan Alley music played in the swingy style . . . The night club comedians were never so hilarious to me as they were last night, the chorines never so easy on the eyes, New York food never so palatable . . . The prodigal son, sitting down to the banquet of the fatted calf, must have felt much as a Broadway columnist feels returning to the miles of mazdas after three weeks.

• • • •

At 10 o'clock I was backstage at the Ziegfeld "Follies" . . . At 11, your reporter was at the Paradise . . . at midnight, he was ringsiding at the Hollywood . . . At 2 a. m. he was applauding Nan Blakstone at Leon and Eddie's . . . At 3 a. m. Mario was serving a creamy, frothy zambaglioni at Jimmy Kelly's . . . At 4, he was screaming hilariously at Jack White's insanities at Dan Healy's Broadway room . . . I made six spots last night, and tonight, by starting out earlier, your correspondent estimates that he can make eight more spots . . . He intends to get plenty of night club mileage out of this sun-tanned chassis.

• • • • •

Terrific kick of the night came at the Hollywood, when Benny Fields, the Miracle Man of Tin Pan Alley, went to town at the Chateau Lyman-Moss . . . Listening to this new sensation, you realize that afte all Life Begins at 40 . . . For Fields, a shade over 40, finally has come into his own, thanks to the perfect wedding of talent and opportunity . . . He always had great talent, but down the years he was cheated of the opportunity . . . Abe Lyman gave him the showcase, and overnight a new sensation was born . . . Your pulses pound as Fields sings "Lullaby of Broadway" as it never has been rendered before, because when he talks of Broadway he's telling you of the street that kicked him and pelted him and humiliated him before bestowing the garland of laurel . . . This is no second-hand interpretation of Broadway . . . Life Begins at 40 . . . They wonder why Benny makes Richman, Crosby and the Dick Powells appear pale and juvenile in their warbling . . . They forget that despair and wretchedness and disappointment take something out of a game guy's heart and spill the concentrate into his voice, giving it the depth and tonal color of a Stradivarius . . . Braddock fought his way off relief to the heavyweight championship of the world . . . Now another Miracle Man is the toast of the town, and as in Braddock's case, the city has let down its hair to enthuse over him

• • • •

Backstage at the Winter Garden, stagehands were whipping scenery in and out of focus . . . Stage Manager Eddie Dowling, in slacks and sweatshirt, darted here and there . . . Bob Hope, Duke McHale and Roger Davis passed the time of day waiting to go on . . . Fred de Cordova, Floridatanned, told of Harriett Hoctor's first and only race track bet, when she put $50 on the nose and $20 to place on Top Row at Santa Anita . . . Cordova takes Dowling's spot now that Eddie goes on the road with "At Home Abroad" . . . Ben Yost, down with the flu, is still out of the cast . . . Billy Rose, stopping by for a second to see his wife, Fanny Brice, confident that ten of the biggest theatrical producers would oppose the Dramatist Guild's demands for stiffer royalties with a gentleman's agreement combination.

• • • •

Life Begins at 40 . . . Jack White proved it again at Dan Healy's Broadway room later in the same evening . . . With a side-splitting song that he seriously introduces as "Don't Throw Stones at the Moon" . . . Jack magnificent song title is the motif of the tune, but once he launches into his song, White discards the motif and substitutes instead queer cries and calls, plays duck-on-the-rock, tick-tack-toe, ring-around-the-rosy and every other game that he remembers from his youth.
